Rockridge Crimes On Increase

Comparing 2005 to 2006

by Susan Montauk, NCPC chairwoman

In 2006, Rockridge came in second in the entire city for an increase, from 2005, in so-called "Part 1 crimes" – homicide, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, larceny, theft, car theft, and arson: not an accomplishment to write home about. First place went to Beat 3Y in Old Oakland (downtown), which had an extraordinary 124% increase in Part 1 crime. Rockridge's beat, 12Y (12Y boundaries are Broadway, the

Rockridge Area Condo and Retail Proposals Ignite Controversy

RCPC's approach to land-use issues questioned

by Cy Gulassa

Until recently, controversy over the spread of condominium projects in Oakland has been a quarrel largely confined to outlying communities – a quarrel off the radar screens of many Rockridge residents. But now, with two new condominium/multi-residential projects proposed for the area near College Avenue and Broadway, a third for Claremont Avenue (on the site of the Kingfish Pub), and yet another for Alcatraz Avenue, the clash between developers and neighbors has reached Rockridge's front yard and emotions are running high.

That was dramatically evident at an RCPC Town Hall meeting in mid-January, at which RCPC committee heads outlined their accomplishments over the past year and sought community ideas on ways to improve Rockridge.

Most of the suggestions, such as how to improve garbage handling and street lighting, were non-controversial. But when the meeting arrived at the final agenda item, on land use, discussion grew heated. A large number of people in the room voiced strong concern about proposed Rockridge developments (see land-use column, page 3), especially a 35-foot-high, six-unit residential build-

Eyes of the Beholders: Two Sides of a Controversial Rockridge Development

A cross-section of the development proposed for 5253 College Avenue shows the proposed building in relation to its original size and typical neighboring residences on Desmond Street. Photos below show project design models prepared by the applicant. The cross-section is from a letter to the city planner by a coalition of concerned neighbors led by Bert Verrips.

by Cy Gulassa

Of the many developments proposed for Rockridge (see "Rockridge Faces Major Residential and Retail Development Proposals," page 3), the Kirk Peterson project at 5253 College Avenue has become one of the most contentious. The three-story development would consist of six units, a rooftop terrace, six ground-level parking garages, and office and commercial space at ground level.

The Rockridge News asked owner/architect Kirk Peterson and Bert Verrips, one of the leaders of a coalition of neighbors who would be affected by the project, for their views. Verrips supplied a 32-page document that his group has sent to the city planner. The developer sent The Rockridge News a letter. Both are summarized and excerpted below.

Neighbors say:

■ Scale: The project's height and bulk are grossly out of scale with neighboring single-family homes. The proposed main structure would fall within the 35-foot height limit but it would sit on a slope, adding five feet of height at the rear. Also, the developer seeks a variance to shift required ground-level open space to a rooftop terrace accessible by an elevator tower and two stairwell towers, which makes the total effective height 60 feet.

■ Noise and loss of privacy: There would be noise and loss of privacy caused by people socializing on the roof terrace and looking down on neighboring yards and into bedroom windows. The rooftop proposal violates the city code requirement that a variance should "not adversely affect the character, livability, or appropriate development of abutting properties or the

RCPC Land Use Committee

Rockridge Faces Major Residential and Retail Development Proposals

Trader Joe's Among Likely Changes Coming to Rockridge

by Hiroko Kurihara, RCPC land use committee chairwoman

Below are some of the major developments in Rockridge that RCPC's land use committee is monitoring this year.

■ TRADER JOE'S (ALBERTSONS SITE): Trader Joe's has applied to the state Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control for a liquor license for the former Albertsons site on College Avenue. If approved, TJ's will presumably be the new tenant. (A company spokeswoman would not confirm TJ's plans for this location.) Because the site is within 1,000 feet of a school, a variance is required to grant the liquor license. The Land Use Committee welcomes comments that RCPC will submit to the planning department as part of the variance process. In response to a written survey at January's Town Hall meeting, most of the 25 respondents called TJ's an acceptable tenant, although some expressed concern that the specialty retail grocery chain doesn't fit with the smaller shops that line College Avenue, but neither did Albertsons. One suggested that TJ's put affordable housing above its store, as exists over its North Beach location. Other ideas included an outdoor eating area like the one at Whole Foods, "greening" the parking area with permeable surfaces and trees, a bike parking area and a city carshare space. Concern was expressed about traffic and pedestrian safety for Claremont Middle schoolers and Oak Grove Avenue residents. Send comments to H2Oakland@sbcglobal.net or call 510/384-3146.

■ 5253 COLLEGE AVENUE: Kirk Peterson Architects has applied for a permit to build a six-unit building above commercial space at this location, near Broadway next to the Pilates Studio. It will have an impact on residents to the west along Desmond Street. RCPC's position is that this project should incorporate retail at ground level, at least along the street frontage. RCPC has submitted comments to the city (see our website: www.rockridge.org) and will stay involved.

■ 332 ALCATRAZ AVENUE (BERKLAND CHURCH SITE): Owner/builder Jerry Boddum is considering developing a single 14-unit building or six individual three-story buildings and is willing to meet with residents before submitting a formal application.

■ 5132 TELEGRAPH AVENUE (GLOBAL VIDEO SITE): Owner Hauser Architects is proposing a six-story, 144-unit, mixed-use development. RCPC along with FROG Park and Friends of Temescal Creek representatives have met once with the developer. Hauser's representative, Rockridge resident Will Mollard (415/701-0554 ext. 18), is willing to meet with other interested groups. A meeting to discuss this and other projects, facilitated by Councilwoman Jane Brunner, will be held February 15 at the Faith Presbyterian Church, located at 49th and Webster. This agenda item is slated for 7:45 – 9 p.m.

■ 5227 CLAREMONT AVENUE AND 5248 TELEGRAPH AVE (KINGFISH PUB SITE): North Oakland Co-Housing is buying this property from Shasta Productions and has hired a development manager, Co-Housing Resources, to hire the architect and manage the nonprofit, 30-unit project. A meeting to discuss this and other projects, facilitated by Councilwoman Jane Brunner, will be held February 15 at Faith Presbyterian Church, 49th and Webster. This agenda item is slated for 6:30 – 7:45 p.m.

■ 5175 BROADWAY: A 28-unit building has been proposed for the former gas station/Delancey Street Christmas tree lot across from Wendy's. A community meeting was held in early January; public notice of the project is on hold pending a study of traffic flow. The application can be viewed at the planning counter, 250 Ogawa Plaza, second floor. This project will go to the planning commission, probably on February 21. The planner is Pete Vollman, e-mail address PVollman@oaklandnet.com.

Why C-31 Zoning for College Avenue is in Danger

by Ronnie Spitzer

California's planning system guides community development through the use of two basic tools: the "general plan" concept and local zoning. But in Oakland, these are in conflict.

The general plan is a comprehensive master plan that lays out a city's future development in general terms. The municipal planning code (also sometimes referred to as the planning/zoning code) is supposed to translate the general plan's broad policy statement into specific requirements for individual landowners.

The City of Oakland adopted its current general plan in 1998, following extensive community input. But the Oakland Planning Code, Title 17 of the municipal code (viewable online at www.oaklandnet.com under either Planning Code or Municipal Code – Title 17), was never updated after the general plan was adopted. And therein lie many problems facing current and future development in North Oakland.

Currently in Oakland, if a proposal conforms with the general plan but not the planning/zoning code, general-plan policies and land-use designations prevail, and the project requires either a conditional-use permit or re-zoning. Guidelines have been developed for a "best-fit" zone corresponding to the classifications of the general plan. Sounds reasonable, no?

But the devil is in the details. For North Oakland, the single general-plan land-use classification "Neighborhood Center Mixed Use" applies to College Avenue, Piedmont Avenue, Telegraph Avenue between Claremont Avenue and Highway 580, and MacArthur Boulevard. Four separate planning designations apply to these locations, each with its own height and density limits, parking requirements, open space provisions, and allowed activities. And all are superseded by general plan specifications.

Where does that leave Rockridge? The planning/zoning designation applicable to Rockridge's College Avenue is known as the C-31 Special Retail Commercial Zone. The maximum allowable height of 35 feet for commercial buildings along College Avenue contributes to the comfortable ambience. Ground-floor commercial uses revolve around pedestrian-oriented retail stores, which fuels our successful business district. It is a formula that works well.

Yet under the general plan, the maximum allowable residential density is higher than the 100-units per acre permitted under C-31. While it is true that building to the general-plan-allowed density requires a height variance to the planning/zoning code, which formerly was difficult to obtain, developments in North Oakland now routinely receive these variances, often for two additional stories. In addition, multiple variances are now routinely granted, effectively thwarting a planning/zoning code meant to allow exceptions only in special circumstances.

The city's failure, after eight years, to reconcile zoning with the general plan is said by some to be illegal. Certainly, it is changing the face of North Oakland outside Rockridge by, in effect, re-zoning these neighborhoods.

The question now is, what's in store for Rockridge in the future?

Ronnie Spitzer is a former vice-chairwoman of RCPC.

FROG

A monthly update on what's happening at the best community-built and maintained park in Oakland

by Mike McDonald, RCPC boardmember and Frog Steering Committee member

Jennifer Cooper elected as new FROG Chairwoman

At its January meeting, the FROG Steering Committee unanimously elected Jennifer Cooper as the new FROG chairwoman for 2007. Jennifer has been vice-chairwoman for the past year and led the Phase II build projects. Many thanks to outgoing chairwoman Theresa Nelson, who will remain an active committee member, for all her hard work and leadership!

2007/2008 Key Priorities and Objectives Identified

The Steering Committee identified key priorities and tasks for 2007 and 2008 at its January meeting, as laid out below. Pretty exciting stuff...looking forward to seeing you all in the park. Remember: you are always welcome at our monthly FROG meetings, held (usually) on the second Wednesday of the month, 7 p.m., at the Rockridge library. Contact chairwoman Jennifer Cooper to confirm meeting dates at jennifer@live-work.com

Permanent Restroom at Hardy Park

Lots of talk about needing a permanent restroom at Hardy Park vs. the current and lovely "porta-potty." This is a long-range project that will involve neighborhood discussion (some neighbors have expressed concern that a permanent restroom may cause transient/homeless issues), city support (the city is going to have to agree to maintain it) and financial support (a permanent restroom is going to cost some bucks). Steering committee member Mike McDonald has agreed to head up the committee to begin the discussion process. If you have an interest in working on this project or thoughts or ideas, contact Mike by e-mail at mike@m-c-d.net

Greenbelt Extension to BART

Do you know that there is a beautiful wooded ravine that runs along the north side of Highway 24, behind properties on Claremont Avenue and between Hudson and Forest Streets? And do you know that this ravine could be a path and a connection from the Greenbelt in Hardy Park to the BART station? Currently fenced off, this land is controlled by Caltrans and perhaps others. However, steering committee members Ronnie Spitzer, Mike McDonald and Jennifer Cooper have agreed to take on this exciting project and figure out how to make the path happen. Imagine being able to walk from BART to 51st and Telegraph using only the Greenbelt. If you have an interest in working on this project or thoughts or ideas, contact Ronnie Spitzer by e-mail at rspitzer@sbcglobal.net

OTHER KEY OBJECTIVES AND TASKS FOR 2007 AND 2008:

Volunteer Recruitment

As always, we need more park stewards and volunteers. Come on people, this is your park and volunteering is fun, easy and a great way to meet your neighbors. For more information, contact Howard Ferrier by e-mail at hwferrier@sbcglobal.net

The Creek Flow Project

Getting the creek to flow year-round has become quite a project, and Joan Marie Wood continues to lead the charge. For more information, contact Joan Marie by e-mail at joanmariew@earthlink.net

Dog Park Issues and Enhancements

Park committee newcomer Paul Jackson is already jumping in and taking on enhancements and coordination issues for the Hardy dog park. Possible improvements identified include relocation of the gate near the swings, fence improvements, gate lock, safety and signage. For more information, contact Paul by e-mail at paulj@mp34u.com

Improvements at DMV/Farmers Market

Improvements including a new picnic table, landscaping, park orientation signage, a "parking" area for dogs and bikes, and possible swings head Jennifer Cooper's task list for 2007. Jennifer will also head up the completion of the public art project. Contact Jennifer for more information or how to help by e-mail at jennifer@live-work.com.

Letters to The Editor

The Rockridge News welcomes letters to the editor. Include your name, address and a phone number for verification. Only your name will appear with your letter. Letters may be edited for clarity and brevity.

A POSITIVE VISION FOR DEVELOPMENT IN NORTH OAKLAND EDITOR:

Members of the Temescal-Rockridge Community who support socially responsible higher density development in North Oakland have formed a group called ULTRA (Urbanists for a Livable Temescal Rockridge Area).

Like numerous respected housing, land-use and environmental organizations in the Bay Area (as well as our newly elected Mayor, Ron Dellums), members of ULTRA realize that in order to foster environmentally sustainable and equitable development, it is necessary to allow for higher height and density along our main transportation corridors.

Creating more affordable housing opportunities in our area is a central part of ULTRA's mission and we cannot do it if we restrict height and density too greatly. In its "Myths and Facts about Affordable and High Density Housing," the Association of Bay Area Governments agrees, stating as their number one fact, "To encourage housing affordability, California cities do need to promote higher densities."

However, we understand that we cannot solely allow for higher height and density without well thought-out development guidelines. We must also work together to shape the zoning in North Oakland to make sure that future development does what we want it to do for us.

Through education and active, positive participation, our community can achieve socially responsible higher density development along main commercial and transportation corridors that will support economic and cultural diversity, affordable housing and community-based commercial properties, local public schools, community services, neighborhood-oriented businesses, alternative transportation use, pedestrian and bike safety, more open green spaces, cultural venues, and healthy community interaction.

We hope you will join us in looking for creative solutions to realizing our vision for North Oakland.

We are tentatively scheduling an educational forum in late March to look at these issues and help us develop guidelines for future development. Please check our website for details as they develop: www.ultraoakland.org.

— Suzanne L'Heureux

NEW GROUP FORMS TO TAKE A STAND EDITOR:

In response to the flood of large-scale developments proposed for Rockridge, Temescal, and adjacent North Oakland communities, neighbors have formed the group STAND (Standing Together for Accountable Neighborhood Development) to challenge this current trend and provide a voice for the growing number of people alarmed by the number, size, and density of development projects that the city has allowed to sail through the approval process.

While we support growth and recognize the benefits that new development can bring, we believe the city has been doing a poor job of identifying the full range of impacts of these projects – on traffic, pedestrian safety, parking, community character, air quality, solar reduction, and noise – and of ensuring that these impacts are mitigated so that our communities truly benefit from these projects.

Our intention is to influence the design of new projects early in the planning stages by interacting with developers and city staff to give these new projects a form that allows an increase in density while maintaining the established character of our neighborhoods. To us that means advocating height, bulk and density controls that retain the human scale of streetscapes and avert compromising the quality of our 100-year-old, low-rise residences and commercial districts.

Legal guidance is essential in this process, since a public record must be established that can

Claremont School Spring Fling Coming

On Saturday, May 19, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., the Claremont Middle School PTA will host its third annual Spring Fling. The Spring Fling is a fun day to come out and support your local middle school community. Great food, local entertainment, games of chance, arts and crafts booths, a raffle, and much more are planned, with the highlight being our silent auction. The silent auction is our biggest fundraiser of year. Most donations come from College Avenue merchants, Claremont families, and staff. Proceeds from the Spring Fling fund programs that benefit ALL Claremont students.

Please consider making a donation. If you'd like to donate an item or service for the auction, rent booth space to sell your food or wares, or perform on the community stage, please call Becky Indrio at 510/655-5522.

The festival will be held on the school grounds, at 5750 College Avenue (next to the Rockridge BART station). All are welcome and admission is FREE.

CORRECTION: In "Assemblyman: Restore Local Control to Oakland Schools" page 1, The Rockridge News, January 6, a report on API gains of Rockridge schools omitted Claremont Middle School. The California Department of Education reports that Claremont's score grew from 589 in 1999 to 631 in 2006 for an increase of 7.1 percent.

Board Election

RCPC is a nonprofit public benefit organization, founded in 1985 to preserve and enhance the unique character of the Rockridge neighborhood, promote the health, safety, and quality of life of its residents, furnish a forum for community involvement, and provide leadership and representation of neighborhood interests.

RCPC will hold its annual election in April for six board directors, each of whom serves a two-year term. The board consists of 12 elected directors and one appointed director. (The editor of The Rockridge News serves as a non-voting, appointed 14th boardmember.) Candidates must be at least 18, reside within RCPC boundaries and inform RCPC of their intention to run for office by the February 28 deadline. (Note: Under RCPC bylaws, former directors are subject to term limits.) Simply send an e-mail by February 28 to rcpcelections07@comcast.net; or, send a letter, postmarked by February 28, to RCPC Elections, 5245 College Avenue, PMB 311, Oakland, CA 94618. A map and description of RCPC boundaries are available online at www.rockridge.org.

Candidates who meet the February 28 deadline will be required to submit a photo and a statement of up to 125 words describing their interest in running for the board. Statements and photos will be published in the April issue of the Rockridge News and must be received by the newsletter's March 22 deadline. Please include your address, phone number and an e-mail address. Electronic copies may be sent to rcpcelections07@comcast.net. Mail hard copies to RCPC Elections, 5245 College Ave, PMB 311, Oakland, CA 94618.

Candidates will speak, and voting will take place, at the April 19 Town Hall meeting to be held upstairs in the Rockridge library from 7 to 9 p.m. Voting will also take place on Saturday, April 21, in the lobby of the Rockridge library, 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. All persons age 18 and over who reside within RCPC boundaries are eligible to vote.

For further information, e-mail RCPC Chairwoman Jessica Pitt at rcpcelections07@comcast.net.

Chabot Elementary's Annual Spring Auction to Raise Enrichment Program Funds

by Susie Poncelet

Join the Anthony Chabot Elementary School Parent-Teacher Association for our annual Spring Auction fundraiser, on Saturday, March 24, from 6 p.m. to 11 p.m., at the Pauley Ballroom at U.C. Berkeley. This year's theme, "Midnight at the Oasis," promises a wonderful evening of fine food, drinks, good company, live music, a live auction, and, of course, the silent auction. All sorts of wonderful prizes await those who attend, including donations from local merchants and custom events including dinners and parties.

The auction is Chabot's biggest fundraiser and all proceeds support the school's enrichment programs, including vocal and instrumental music, fine arts, library resources, technology, Spanish, and an on-site garden curriculum. The PTA also contributes to improvements in the physical plant. Chabot is the local elementary school in Rockridge and is one of the reasons this neighborhood is so desirable. We have a fabulous principal, wonderful teachers, and a topnotch curriculum. We appreciate the support of our local businesses and friends as we strive for excellence in our public schools.

ing plus commercial space, with rooftop deck, on high ground near the intersection of College and Broadway at 5253 College Avenue. Some said that the project is out of scale with the neighborhood at this end of College Avenue, that it ignores its impact on neighbors, and that it “alters the character of Rockridge.”

One speaker called for a moratorium on all construction until the Oakland General Plan and the city’s zoning ordinances are reconciled; another person urged RCPC to take a citywide stance against the “hostile acts of developers” who take advantage of a “rubber-stamp” Oakland Planning Commission and manipulate existing zoning rules to “maximize the construction envelope.”

The debate intensified when some community members in attendance questioned the leadership of RCPC’s land use committee chairwoman, Hiroko Kurihara, accusing her of having a bias in favor of high-density projects. (In addition to chairing the land use committee, Kurihara is a founding member of Urbanists for a Livable Temescal Rockridge Area (ULTRA), which supports high-density construction along Oakland’s major corridors. The group’s goals – as posted on its web site – are printed below.)

“Who do you advocate for, developers or Rockridge neighbors?” one participant demanded. Running through many of the comments was the concern that RCPC, an association of Rockridge neighbors, may be drifting from one of its stated core purposes, to provide leadership and representation of neighborhood interests, especially in the area of planning and zoning.

Some defended Kurihara. RCPC Board Vice-Chairman Mike Taylor said at the meeting that the board had reviewed complaints against her and had determined that her role in ULTRA does not constitute a conflict of interest. Former board member Adrienne DeAngelo added that in 2005, Kurihara helped a group of DeAngelo’s neighbors successfully oppose a retail development near the intersection of Colby Street and Claremont Avenue, claiming these actions were evidence that Kurihara is not biased in favor of development.

Some also defended higher density. “Millions of people are coming to the Bay Area,” one woman said, “and since they can’t be stopped, it’s best to accommodate them.” Admitting hers was an unpopular view at the meeting, she urged groups to “negotiate” with developers to promote higher density even if residents objected. “It’s better to make space for everybody rather than just be anti-development.”

As the meeting drew to a close, Mary MacDonald, a former RCPC chairwoman, took the floor, saying she “felt the emotion in the room” and could no longer remain silent. In perhaps the most dramatic statement of the evening, MacDonald told attendees that many of RCPC’s former board members disagree with the direction the current board has been taking in the area of land use. She described an RCPC retreat held a year ago, in which former board members met with current board members and raised serious “concerns about the new board’s position on density.” That meeting, along with other measures, she said failed to build their confidence in the current board’s approach. “For those of you here who have perceived a difference in the direction of RCPC, you are not wrong,” Macdonald said. “Former board members share your view.”

MacDonald also criticized RCPC’s plan to hold a series of small meetings in people’s homes to learn their land use priorities. She said she feared that such a process could be manipulated “to support what is the position

What is ULTRA?

At the January RCPC Town Hall meeting, a clarification of the goals of Urbanists for a Livable Temescal Rockridge Area (ULTRA) was requested by some in the audience. Following are the goals as posted on the organization’s web site at <http://www.ultraoakland.org/>.

We Want:

- Socially responsible higher density mixed-use along the main commercial corridor.
- Positive movement forward into a future of diversity and pedestrian-oriented mixed use.
- Prevention of strip malls and auto-dependence.
- Creation of places that bring activated, cultural arts spaces.
- Transit corridors, when properly planned and coordinated, can help revitalize neighborhood retail and commercial corridors.
- A broad range of housing types and price levels that higher densities could encourage can bring people of diverse ages, races, and incomes into daily interaction, strengthening the personal and civic bonds essential to an authentic community.

- Appropriate building densities and land uses should be within walking distance of transit stops, permitting public transit to become a viable alternative to the automobile.

ULTRA recognizes that height is the most controversial issue about new development along Telegraph Avenue. We strongly believe that setting an arbitrary height limit for development along the Avenue will impede the further revitalization of Telegraph Avenue. The economics of development change much more rapidly than City guidelines can. We believe that each project must be judged upon its merits. That is if a project would help achieve the goals articulated above then it should be approved whether its height meets an arbitrary limit or not. However we do accept the reality in our community of a desire for a height limit. We believe any height limit should be based upon the visual impact a building will have when viewed from the street.

of some – not all – of [the] current board members to promote high density.” She added, “If RCPC wants to hold planning sessions to learn the community’s views on density, it has to hold several large, open, well-advertised meetings where the public can freely debate the issues.” MacDonald’s remarks received strong applause.

In response, Kurihara defended the board’s plan to hold the small meetings at homes, senior centers, churches, and even schools, where she plans to talk to school-children about the density issue. “I’m not quite sure what the fear is around having more intimate, coffee klatch kind of discussions,” she said. “It’s OK to talk to kids,

RCPC Seeks Community Suggestions For Local Capital Improvements

RCPC asked Town Hall meeting participants to suggest ways to enhance Rockridge’s quality of life via a local capital improvements program the organization is sponsoring. Among their answers:

- better street lighting;
- gathering spaces along streets;
- more trees;
- a community center;
- graffiti abatement;

- better commercial garbage collection;
- more bike racks;
- restoring Birch Court’s pillars; and
- a website “portal” to Rockridge.

Board Chairwoman Jessica Pitt said redesign of the website is already underway. The board will review the suggestions at its February retreat.

and it’s OK to go into people’s homes and learn, block by block, people’s concerns. There is no agenda here.”

RCPC Chairwoman Jessica Pitt ended

the meeting by inviting residents with strong views on land use and other Rockridge issues to run for the RCPC board. RCPC elections are slated for April. (See election notice, page 1.)

do with children that connects them to a whole new world of natural wonders? This February, the 10th annual Great Backyard Bird Count, sponsored by the Cornell Lab of Ornithology and the National Audubon Society, will give everyone a chance to discover the birds in their neighborhood and "Count for the Record." Last year, participants counted a record-breaking 623 species and more than 7.5 million birds. This year, Cornell and Audubon are challenging participants to break the record of 61,000 checklists submitted in the year 2000, the greatest number of checklists ever submitted during the annual four-day event.

Your Help Will Make a Difference

The success of the Great Backyard Bird Count depends on participants counting birds across the United States and Canada. Help spread the word by asking people to count birds for at least 15 minutes during February 16-19. It's fun, easy, raises awareness of birds, and provides an important record of where the birds are that scientists can use to track how birds are faring as their environments change.

Participants can take part wherever they are – at home, in schoolyards, or in local parks or wildlife refuges. Simply count the highest number of each species you see during an outing or a sitting and enter your tally on the Great Backyard Bird Count website, <http://www.birdsource.org/gbc>. You can also use the website to compare your sightings with results from other participants, as checklists pour in from throughout the U.S. and Canada. The website also offers identification tips and access to photos, sounds, maps, and natural history information on more than 500 bird species. You can also submit photos to an online gallery showcasing the dazzling array of winter birds found.

Put Up Posters and Distribute Brochures

You can download a poster/brochure from the website and print it out. (Note that posters from ink jet printers may not last in the rain.) If you prefer to receive posters in the mail, the Cornell Lab of Ornithology will send them to you. Just e-mail Jennifer

Smith at jls39@cornell.edu. Write "GBBC poster" in the subject line; in the message, provide your mailing address and the number of posters you would like.

We hope that you will consider picking up one or more of the routes vacated by two of our stalwart Rockridge News volunteers, Maria Cavallo of Hardy Street and a Harwood Avenue volunteer. Thanks to both of them for serving as Rockridge News Block Captains.

It takes 10-20 minutes once a month to deliver to a route. Here are five routes that need Block Captains:

- 04A Part of College Avenue from 5930 to 6022.
- 05J From 5920 College even numbers down College to Chabot Road, odd numbers on Chabot Road at College to Ivanhoe.
- 21G Along the odd numbers of 6000 Claremont.
- 15D Both sides of 5100 Shafter, between Cavour and 51st Street
- 04J Starting at Medical Insurance Building on Claremont, down Claremont to College, up Florio, doing 6214 (4 units) and 6201 (upper unit at rear of bank building).

Call 547-3855 or e-mail Susan at smontauk@gmail.com to volunteer. Be sure to mention the delivery route and give us a call-back number.

THE Rockridge MUSE

by Claire Isaacs Wahrhaftig

What Art Is Not

People often wonder, "What is art?" Like truth, beauty and happiness, it is almost indefinable. However, here's what art is not: craft. A craft can be part of art, but it is not the art. A craft teaches us to construct something according to rules laid down and longtime practices. Some folks are extremely accomplished at craft, and they go so far as to create something new, fresh, beyond the boundaries, thereby creating art. One example: the craft of quilting as seen in the recent exhibition at the De Young Museum, the Gee's Bend quilts.

But too often at schools and summer camps, leaders present a finished product and instruct the kids how to make it. That's not teaching art.

One day, when I was a kid at summer camp, we all made shoeshine boxes out of wood. These were used to store one's shoe waxes and brushes and to place one's foot upon while shining the shoe. The only variable was the limited number of colors we applied. That's a simple craft. My parents were pleased, sort of, but I was dissatisfied. There was little of myself in this product. I felt as if I hadn't really created anything at all. I was just good at following directions. And it wasn't something I wanted to try again.

But give the children the wood slats and chips, glue and paint, and let them go blast away at their creation. Some will build contained forms safely glued. Others will aspire to build up and out, testing the balance and security of each attached piece of wood. No two will look alike. That's art.

The late artist Art Grant used this approach with adults in Oakland night schools. He opened doors to police officers and pipefitters and seamstresses. People who thought they weren't artists were surprised to see what they could create when allowed and encouraged to do so. He just kept smiling at them – people who said, "I can't do that" – and they created like crazy. A few of them went on to explore art further. He offered his students what they often lacked in school: a chance to create freely, without criticism.

What are your children getting in school, after school and in camp? Does what they learn connect them with our ancestors, who danced and sang and drew and dramatized stories to share their experiences with the rest of the tribe?

Before literacy we had what we now call the visual arts to convey our feelings, thoughts, and experiences. Whatever our culture today, the arts are a basic and fundamental human experience. To ignore them in our homes and schools is to deprive us of one of the foundations of our souls.

Library and Art

In view of the lack of public exhibition space in Rockridge, it is a blessing that our great local library commits its upstairs walls and lobby display case to art shows. These vary greatly in quality and skill, but some display a surprisingly high level of accomplishment. Take a detour each month on your way to a meeting or the bookshelves and decide what you think. Often the work is that of a young artist showing his or her work for the first time. Some work may be amateurish but nevertheless passionately conceived. Looking at art by artists in this stage of development is a great opportunity to test one's own values and develop the critical ability to discern what works and what does not.

surrounding area.”

■ Solar access and lighting: The main building has a rear yard setback of only 10 feet and a side yard setback of 5 feet. Because it would sit so close to nearby homes with small yards, the building would affect the livability of adjacent properties by, among other things, blocking solar access and causing lighting impacts at night due to its necessarily large number of windows.

■ Traffic noise: The project calls for six ground-level garages accessible via a 10-foot-wide alley. There would be engine noise, door slams, beeper alarms, screeching tires and loud voices in an acoustically sensitive area.

■ Inappropriate business activity: The proposed professional offices in the rear are inappropriate because of their proximity to dwellings.

■ Inadequate egress: The access proposed for the rear of the project – a 10-foot-wide alley – would be impassable to most emergency vehicles.

“In brief, the zoning standards do not confer a right to develop property to the maximum building envelope. The blind adherence to the allowable limits of zoning standards, coupled with permissive variances, results in an overly massive development that is inappropriate to the existing neighborhood context and adversely impacts the peace, health and safety of neighbors.”

The applicant says:

“College Avenue is characterized by a mix of uses and building sizes...The proposed project represents a type and size of development that is not uncommon along the Avenue, and is common in similar neighborhoods throughout Oakland. This historic pattern also includes adjacencies of commercial and residential occupancies, including single family homes next to larger structures.

“...I am agreeable to RCPC’s suggestion of moving my office to the rear portion of the project...”

“This proposed development demonstrates the sort of thoughtful design that will augment the aesthetic character of the area. I work hard to design buildings that are ‘historically informed’ and fit well in their physical context. To see the sort of work I do I invite you to look at my web site, KPAarch.com, or at 5330 College Avenue or the building going up on Piedmont Avenue at Pleasant Valley.

“...I have expressed my willingness to meet with neighbors, but that I prefer to wait until I receive written comments from the city. I am sure that there will be some conditions if the application is approved, prompting some revision of the design. The planner has already suggested that the roof deck be pulled back from the edge.

“I am posting my drawings of the project in the front window here at 5253 College, along with a study model of the building. I have invited neighbors to visit my office and look at the plans; only one has. I hope more people will look at the design and form their own opinions of the project. The project will have an impact on the adjacent properties. I hope we will be able discuss the proposed building based on an accurate understanding of the proposal.”

Rockridge Crime

Telegraph Avenue and 51st Street), saw an overall Part 1 crime increase of 29%.

In Rockridge, robberies topped the list. Attempted robberies increased sixfold, from 1 to 6 incidents; armed robberies also were up, from 37 to 55 incidents. Auto burglary and car theft increased by significant numbers.

Upper Rockridge's Beat 13X was more fortunate this year, with a 9.7% reduction in Part 1 crime from 2005. (2005 saw a short-term peak of activity, with the Broadway rape and a cluster of burglaries in late summer and fall.)

There was a 57% increase in homicides in the city as a whole, but Part 1 crime citywide increased by only 5.5%. Reasons being put forth by police and others for the increase include these possible explanations:

■ Pressure on the police force to complete the tasks mandated by the "Riders" settlement agreement creates onerous restrictions on police arrest procedure and, thus, fewer arrests.

■ Juvenile crime is on a sharp upswing. Several years ago, with juvenile crime declining statewide and changing attitudes about the efficacy of institutionalization, activists persuaded the county to downsize the plans for the construction of the new juvenile hall, scheduled to open in 2007. Concurrently, the Alameda County Probation Department has drastically reduced the number of kids it is holding, accepting only those who commit the most serious crimes. With no place to take them, police began to arrest fewer juveniles. The news was not lost on the criminals, who continue their work with impunity.

Why, though, has Rockridge's whopping 29% Part 1 crime increase surpassed Oakland's 5.5%? One likely explanation is that Rockridge is an increasingly upscale neighborhood and the criminals know it. Car theft has historically been the crime of choice in our community. Now, combined with the above factors tending to increase crime citywide, residential burglaries and armed robberies are not far behind.

The best prospects for crime prevention do not reside in the enforcement sector. While OPD strives to reach its goal of 805 cops, shortages in staffing are the norm, with just over 700 police currently on duty. Community policing, neighborhood watch organizations, and smart prevention measures appear to be the best bulwark against this crime trend. Citizens should take measures to make their homes unattractive to burglars and be very alert when walking streets or exiting cars and homes, always on the lookout for suspicious characters.

Here are some concrete steps to take: Call the non-emergency number if you suspect someone may be looking for a crime opportunity: 777-3333. From home call 911 if you see a crime in progress; from a cell phone call 777-3211. Write down license numbers of suspicious cars and take a photo when possible. Join the Rockridge Neighborhood Crime Network Yahoo group to report crimes and suspicious behavior. Attend the Neighborhood Crime Prevention Council meetings, held the third Tuesday of each month, 7 p.m., at California College of the Arts.

WhistleStop is an action safety program that can provide residents of our community with another practical way of self-protection and neighborhood awareness. WhistleStop combines individual action ("I can signal for help") and neighborhood action ("We can protect one another").

Whistles are available for $2.50 each at Cotton & Company, 5901 College Avenue, Oakland.

See www.rockridgencpc.com for directions, crime stats and other resource material.
