Rumors Abound Regarding Fate of Albertsons Site

Possible uses for former Albertsons include Ross Dress for Less, Trader Joe's, condos.

by Michael McDonald, RCPC Board Member, Land Use Committee

As of December 1, Mark Koenig of Terranomics, the real estate broker representing the College Avenue Albertsons site, confirmed that the Albertsons property was "in contract to be purchased," but would not comment on the identity of the potential new owner, nor would he comment on the prospective buyer's type of business.

Koenig's office further stated that there had been overwhelming interest in the College Avenue site from national and regional retailers, real estate investors of all types and housing and mixed use developers. Given the potential value of this site, and several other Bay Area Albertsons sites, Terranomics chose not to put an asking sales price on the site, but rather solicited bids from interested parties that were due in early August of this year.

Since the Albertsons site became available earlier this year, speculation as to who might take over the site has run wild in the community. Rumors include Trader Joe's, Ross "Dress for Less," and a mixed-use housing/retail development. In July, a meeting hosted by RCPC about the potential future of the site attracted a large attendance and responses from more than 200 Rockridge residents and community leaders who provided dozens of suggestions for the site's use.

In early November, students from UC Berkeley's Haas School of Business and the Goldman School of Public Policy, working on a hypothetical development assignment for a class, met with the RCPC Land Use Committee, community residents and a representative from Councilmember Jane Brunner's office, and separately with local real estate developer Ron Kriss, to share their ideas for a mixed use housing/retail project for the site. In a presentation of the class project, UC Berkeley graduate students Joseph Wright, Jean Shia, and Elizabeth Kelly suggested the site might be ideal for an upscale mixed use housing and retail development with as many as 85 apartments or condominiums and 10,000 square feet of retail. EBMUD Calls for Water Conservation As Tunnel Bypass Enters Final Stage

by Claire Isaacs Wahrhaftig

Starting immediately, East Bay Municipal Utility District (EBMUD) officials are requesting that water users north of Highway 24 reduce their use of water voluntarily by 10% daily, due to an operational adjustment during the final stage of building the new tunnel. In fact, water is not in short supply — reservoirs are full — but connecting the new bypass requires that the tunnel be closed until March, 2007. During that time, workers will drill through an additional 30 feet to reroute future water flow into the new bore.

Known as the bypass, this new bore replaces the one directly on the Hayward Fault and most prone to damage in the event of an earthquake. Built to the latest seismic standards, the new bypass was needed because supporting timbers in the old tunnel were too far apart for stability, and the tunnel had separated from the original bore by as much as five feet in places. These conditions made collapse probable in an earthquake.

Engineers have shored up the entire length of the 3.4-mile tunnel from near Orinda, but the

Chabot Elementary Carnival a Big Success

Chabot Elementary's Fall Carnival on October 29 was a big success, thanks to great weather, great enthusiasm and spectacular attendance.

We'd like to thank everyone in the community for supporting us, and hope that those of you who came had a wonderful time. We exceeded our fundraising target for this PTA community building event, which supports enrichment programs at the school for Art, Music, Technology, Library, Garden and Spanish programs to 500 Chabot students.

For those of you who missed it, mark your calendars for October 21 next year, when the Chabot Fall Carnival will return, better than ever.

For questions about this event or about Chabot's fundraising efforts or programs, contact Tamara Morrish at 205-6971 or tamara@secventures.com.

Chabot School Offers a Special Musical Treat

Join us in the Chabot Elementary School Auditorium on Friday evening, December 8 at 7 p.m., for a concert by Corinne West and the Posse.

This is a rare opportunity for an intimate encounter with this rising star and her talented band members, who have been making a buzz locally and nationally on the American/folk/bluegrass scene. The concert will be a family event that will raise funds for Chabot's enrichment programs, which provide Art, Music, Library, Technology, Garden and Spanish classes to Chabot students.

To learn more about the musicians, visit http://www.corinnesmusic.com. Visit our website at www.chabotelementary.org for a ticket order form. Tickets are $12 for adults, $6 for kids.

College Preparatory Students Excell in Scholarship Competition

Pr. Murray Cohen of the College Preparatory School recently announced that 23 members of the class of 2007 have been named semi-finalists and 33 as commended students in the 2007 National Merit Scholarship Competition. In addition, four members have been recognized by the National Achievement for Black Americans, and four as honorable mentions and scholars by the National Hispanic Recognition Program. These students represent seventy percent of the College Prep class of 2007.

"The National Merit Program is important to all juniors and seniors in high school," said Martin Bonilla, CPS Director of College Counseling. Semi-finalists will enter into competition for scholarships to be granted next spring. The awards will help finance their college careers."

As National Merit semi-finalists, these exceptional students placed among the top 1% of California high-school students into RCPC's annual strategic plan at its retreat in late January.

The meeting will also be an opportunity to update community members on the work of RCPC's committees over the past year. You will hear about important developments around traffic and pedestrian safety, plans for improving the area under-BART, and our efforts to redesign the RCPC website so that it becomes a valuable portal for information, news, and activities in Rockridge.

In 2007, RCPC plans to launch a new capital improvements campaign, with the goal of investing small amounts of money in capital improvement projects around the neighborhood, such as helping restore the pillars at the entrance to Birch Court. Please come with your ideas and suggestions for capital improvement projects that RCPC might take on. We will develop a list of priority projects and incorporate as many as we can into our annual budget.

We hope you can join us for this important meeting. We greatly value the input of community members and look forward to hearing your priorities for Rockridge in 2007.

final 1,500 foot portion in Oakland has been completely replaced. The water tunnel, built in 1929, serves 800,000 people daily from Crockett to Castro Valley, according to Charles Hardy, EBMUD public relations representative. The upgrade is funded by a $37-million bond issue, part of a ten-year, $100-million seismic upgrade following post Loma Prieta studies of the District's system weaknesses.

During this final stage of construction, the public is asked to observe a modest voluntary reduction in water use by 10%, by means of simple measures like:

- Turning off irrigation clocks and timers, irrigating less frequently
- Fixing toilet leaks; replacing loose flappers

- Washing cars at commercial car washes, which recycle water
- Substituting a broom for the hose in washing down driveways.

The goal is to reduce winter use from about 80 million to 72 million gallons per day in the areas from Emeryville, including Rockridge, to Crockett. During past winter closures, it was possible to reroute supply through auxiliary systems in case of an emergency in the overall system. However, until March, the engineers and workers will be connecting the new bypass and shutting down the old tunnel, a complicated operation that cannot be interrupted even during an emergency. Reducing the water flow by 10% will ensure a margin of safety against the need to rely on a temporary auxiliary system during the closure and startup of the new bypass.

"EBMUD's Seismic Improvement Program is a model for planning ahead and protecting the community," said William B. Patterson, president of the EBMUD Board of Directors. "Most of the work is done; now we need this group of customers to come through for all of us so we can be safe in the event of an earthquake."

Helping Our Feathered Friends Survive Winter in Rockridge

by Annette Floystrup

Once again we are rushing headlong into winter, and that can mean food shortages for our friends the garden birds. While you are providing for your family's holiday meals, take a moment to consider adding a bird feeder or two to your garden. They also make wonderful holiday gifts!

Ground Feeders

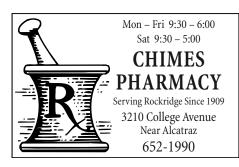

Enough seed always hits the ground to provide good sustenance for the Oregon juncos, those lovely little black-hooded birds with white chests and russet backs. We are also seeing the usual army of mourning doves in their elegant pearly taupe finery. These are locally plentiful (they clutch six times a year), but rapidly disappearing elsewhere. We have finally gotten some white-crowned and yellow-crowned sparrows, who also eat from the ground. Flocks of house finches and sparrows are often mutually exclusive because they are highly competitive for space (turf wars are not limited to humans). Ours tend to hang out at different ends of the house.

Insect Eaters

Last winter, with its heavy rains, was a wonderful opportunity to see many different species of birds, especially for backyard birders who put out a variety of bird foods. The almost unrelenting rains made finding suitable food difficult for many birds, especially the insect eaters who had to fill their protein requirements hampered by having evolved with beaks quite unsuited to cracking seeds. We bought a special seed mix with shelled sunflower and peanut chips, that allowed them to get the protein and fat from these oily seeds, as most insects don't fly in the rain.

We have a repeat visitor from last year, a spectacular Townsend's warbler. With his distinctive yellow head marked with a long black cap, black "Zorro" eye mask and throat and a yellow and black streaked belly, he adds real pizazz to the winter garden. This is the second warbler species I've seen at my house this winter, the other being the Audubon's or yellow-rumped warbler. The yellow-rumps were flying for insects against a warm wall just after a bad rain, but the Townsend's was eating the shelled sunflower chips in my seed mix.

Suet feeders are also invaluable sources of fuel for insect eaters and others on those cold days and nights, and our suet cakes are actively visited by red-breasted nuthatches and chestnut-backed chickadees, with Oregon juncos happily eating what hits the ground.

Bird Feeder Regulars

Our three thistle feeders are positioned around the yard and one is designed exclusively for goldfinches. Among the finches, goldfinches are the only ones capable of feeding in the upside-down position, which is quite entertaining. We are attracting all kinds of finches including American goldfinches, pine siskins, and house finches.

Finches are fun to watch; they arrive in crowds (often as many as 10 to 30) and some are also very colorful. They range in size from 4½ to 6 inches. The American goldfinches are in their winter olive drabs with black wings barred in white, but some of them are already starting their transition to bright lemon yellow with black markings.

Cooper's hawks usually stick to riparian areas and forest edges. A garden usually filled with birdcalls can be eerily silent when this predator is around.

House finches are attracted to regular seed mix, which includes red and white millet, and really love hulled sunflower seed and peanut chips. This tasty mixture brings chestnut-backed chickadees, plain titmice (all gray with pointed head caps), and the occasional Bewick's wren (say "Buick") as well. These perky little brown wrens have long white eyebrows, white underparts and the characteristically entertaining stubby tail which points straight up and bobs and flicks with every movement.

Sugar is Sweet

Hummingbirds often have a tough time in the cold of winter. They are the Ferraris of the small bird world, with feul consumption requirements to match. In Rockridge, we typically see the Anna's Hummingbird which lives here year round. Fairly large as hummingbirds go, the Anna's is about 4" long and a beautiful green on its back with a rose-red head that can appear black in

VANDALS COME IN ALL SIZES

Unfortunately, vandalism isn't just for kids on College Avenue anymore; adults are getting into the act, and it reflects badly on our community.

Many sidewalk repairs are being done on the Avenue to repair damage from street tree roots. Work crews expect that newly poured concrete will attract little fingers, and they do their best to see to it that their hard work is not defaced. But they don't expect adults to ignore safety barricades and temporary sidewalks to deliberately walk through a job site, or worse yet, roll a stroller through it.

In two recent incidents, College Avenue pedestrians showed a total disregard for the highly skilled cement workers and their work, caused extra work for the crews, and aroused the contempt of the crew foreman.

In the first incident, two fathers with small children sat down on the curb and proceeded to write their kids' names in the wet cement with their coffee stirrers. When challenged, they defended their actions, and huffed off with a few well-chosen expletives.

My question: what were they teaching their children about treatment of others' property? Or respect for the work of others?

The second incident involved two women who ignored both the safety barriers and all pleas to stop, and walked through the job site across hardening cement. This generated a good bit of work for the crews to repair the damage, after they had just put in 7 hours to do a job they could be proud of.

Ladies, I salute you! Nice sense of entitlement, and way to go to promote goodwill toward our community.

I hope that in the future we can be more respectful of everyone's hard work.

Experience Corps: Older Adults Help Transform Oakland Schools

by Jessica Bullen, Experience Corps Field Manager

Over the past year-and-a-half, a dedicated force of local older adults has begun transforming the culture of designated Oakland schools. Through participation in Experience Corps Bay Area, a nonprofit, community-based organization geared to matching adults 55 years and older with public school youth as tutors and mentors, volunteers have not only enhanced academic and emotional support for local schoolchildren, but have added an intergenerational feel to school culture.

During the 2005-2006 academic year, 17 volunteers at two North Oakland Elementary School sites provided over 2,200 hours of tutoring and mentoring assistance. The results of their efforts were very encouraging; 9 out of 10 teachers said they were "extremely satisfied" with the work of the Experience Corps Volunteers, and reported "significant" to "extremely significant" academic improvement by students tutored by Experience Corps volunteers.

Experience Corps, a national organization, has been in the Bay Area since 1999 and in Oakland since 2005. While all Experience Corps programs follow an innovative team-based model which highlights quality training, each Experience Corps site adapts to its surrounding community. Experience Corps is looking for more older adults to join our existing three north and east Oakland teams, or help pioneer teams at new expansion sites in January. If you or someone you know would like more information, please contact Jessica Bullen, Experience Corps Oakland Field Manager, at 510/495-4966 or jbullen_ec@yahoo.com.

2006 — A Banner Year for Library Friends

by John Gussman,

Friends of the Rockridge Library

For the Friends of the Rockridge Library
(FORL), 2006 was at: (FORL), 2006 was a time for celebrating past achievements, and for pressing ahead with new enhancements to the Rockridge Library and its offerings.

The peak of the FORL year was the public event held in early September, to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the Rockridge Library in its permanent home at College and Manila (see the October issue of The Rockridge News). In the run-up to the event, the FORL board was working at full throttle, but with good results: the event was declared a definite success by all who took part.

The anniversary event gave renewed impetus to FORL's long-term efforts to promote and enhance the Rockridge Library. These include helping to build the Rockridge Library's permanent collection, upgrading the library's grounds and landscaping, replacing worn-out library furnishings and inadequate equipment, and, in other ways, bringing this valuable neighborhood resource to its fullest luster.

In recent years, FORL has devoted special attention to helping build the Library's reference collection. In 2006, FORL's contributions to this effort have taken the form of a new Encyclopædia Britannica and two large atlases, including the new Oxford Atlas of North America. (Among the earlier FORL gifts are other major, multi-volume reference sets — including the Oxford English Dictionary, the Dictionary of National Biography, and the New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians — and two full sets of the NOLO Press legal selfhelp books.)

FORL is now branching out in the area of collection development, with a gift to the library to help build the holdings of quality audiobooks on CD. The nearly 30 titles to be acquired - all in high-grade "library editions" — include a number of prize-winning novels, memoirs, and works of history, ranging from Philip Roth's The Plot Against America and Edward P. Jones's The Known World, to Frank McCourt's Angela's Ashes, and David McCullough's 1776, as well as some of the popular historical novels by Patrick O'Brian. Several of the books are read aloud by the authors themselves; the rest are read by talented actors. The new audiobooks will begin to appear on the "Hot Picks" shelf at the library early in 2007.

During the past year, FORL also continued with its long-term effort to improve and care for the library's grounds and landscaping. This is a two-pronged effort, which involves pruning and weeding the existing landscaping, as well as selective installations of new ornamental rocks and shrubs. FORL's Landscape Committee has begun working closely with a new and energetic maintenance team from the Oakland Department of Public Works (Clinton Pugh and Oscar Smith, Sr.). As a result of this collaboration, the landscaping that FORL helped to install in 2004 (funded through a special donation from the Rockridge Women's Club) received its first full-scale maintenance.

Another ongoing FORL effort has been to fund and assist with the repair, refinishing, and replacement of key library furnishings. FORL was active in this area during 2006 — for example, replacing the library's large comfortable armchairs in the Reading Circle (special thanks to FORL Treasurer Phil Fitzwater for a private donation). Recently the board voted to fund an upgrading of the musical CD storage, to permit easier browsing.

In 2006, as in prior years, FORL funded a position for a summer intern from Oakland Technical High School to help the librarians manage the Summer Reading Game for children. FORL also renewed its funding for key subscriptions which are beyond the scope of the library's regular periodicals budget, such as The New York Times, The

In 2007, FORL plans to move forward on various fronts, both old and new. The board is currently looking into options for improving the library's climate control and ventilation system. New Urban Cohousing Development Proposed for Temescal Area

by Karen Hester

fter seven or eight years of fruitless After seven or eight year.

Auttempts to find an appropriate site for a new cohousing group, members of the East Bay Cohousing umbrella group have located a wonderful site in North Oakland's Temescal neighborhood and will partner with a local development team to build a 27- to 30-unit new community just north of where Claremont and Telegraph intersect.

North Oakland Cohousing should be completed and ready to move into during the first quarter of 2009. This is a rare opportunity to be part of the first East Bay cohousing community to be developed in six years, and it is likely to be the last one for a long time to come. Cohousers who join at the beginning stage will be able to select unit sizes and prices.

If successful, the project will join with the smaller communities of Temescal Commons Cohousing near 42nd and Telegraph and Temescal Creek Cohousing, near 45th and Broadway, to create the epicenter of cohousing in the United States.

Cohousing communities combine the advantages of private homes with the benefits of more sustainable living, including shared common facilities and ongoing connections with neighbors. These intentional neighborhoods, created and managed by residents, offer an innovative solution to today's environmental and social challenges. (http://cohousing.org)

Green building practices will be emphasized, and the design and size of the units and the common house will be determined by the group in workshops with the architects; individual units are likely to range from studio apartments to 3-4 bedrooms, with common space for community meals, outdoor patios, children's play, guests, laundry, and workshop.

Contact Karen Hester for details about the project and if you have interest in becoming a member: 510/654-6346, karen@hesternet. net, or http://www.northoaklandcohousing.org.

Birds in Winter

some light. A hummingbird feeder is an endless source of entertainment. Males are highly competitive and will dive in death-defying plunges from great heights, only to pull up in a sharp U-turn at the last possible moment. This is both courtship and fighting behavior. If you do put out a hummingbird feeder, remember to change it often and keep it very clean. Hummers are easily poisoned by mold toxins. An easy recipe for sugar syrup is 1 part sugar to 4 parts water, mixed until the sugar is disolved and then brought to a boil in the microwave for food safety. Cool and set out and in a few days, you will have these beautiful visitors to enjoy as well.

Unusual Visitors

Early this fall, we had a second apperance of juvenile Cooper's hawks (http://www.birds.cornell.edu/AllAboutBirds/Bird-Guide/, then click on "Alphabetical"). We had a single juvenile a few years ago, but this year there were two. They announced themselves with sharp "kek kek" feeding calls that sent all the songbirds in the area into hiding. A garden usually filled with birdcalls can be eerily silent when this predator is around.

Cooper's hawks usually stick to riparian areas and forest edges. We live close to one of the few open areas of Temescal Creek, and there are many oaks and redwoods in the immediate area; perfect for this hunter.

This hawk is an Accipiter, a genus of bird that hunts with short bursts of speed, often chasing a songbird through tree branches and brush in a sprint. Eighty percent of their food is songbirds; the balance is small mammals. Our juveniles were just learning to hunt completely on their own, so they seemed to take more rodents than songbirds. We noticed a marked decrease in rodent activity in the ivy at St. Albert's next to our fence, so they probably had an impact on that population.

Natural Rodent Control

Apropos of natural rodent control, many raptors, including owls, make rodents their primary diet, but they have a grave enemy in human beings who use poison to control rodent populations. Poisoned rats and mice become food for these natural pest controllers, and the rat poison kills these magnificent birds.

In California there is a strong effort to repopulate the state with Barn Owls, (http://www.hungryowl.org) and our neighboring city, Berkeley, has made the Barn Owl its city bird. There is a grassroots organization, Hungry Owl Project, dedicated to helping these sweet faced birds in urban areas, and in Berkeley the group Keep Barn Owls in Berkeley (www.KBOIB.org) has formed to distribute information about these helpful birds. You can get directions for building an owl box from them or the Hungry Owl Project. Owl boxes DO usually get an occupant within a year or two, so this is a very rewarding project to do for your garden habitat.

Rockridge has traditionally been home to a variety of raptors including the Great Horned Owl, with its signature "who who" call. This bird is not seen as often as heard, and perches in tall pines and redwoods in the daytime. One of the eeriest and most wonder-inspiring life events one can experience is having an owl glide past one in the night. Their flight is utterly silent due to their fluffy feathers, and their passage is more felt than seen.

Want to See More Pictures?

The Rockridge Library has field guides, encyclopedias and other books just about birds. Guides by the Audubon Society and Roger Tory Peterson are the classics to start from. Our local bookstores, Diesel and Pendragon carry many bird books both new and used. In addition, there are many wonderful websites about birds, including the Cornell University Lab of Ornithology where you can hear the birds as well as read about them. Search online at the library for keywords birds, wild birds, and bird feeding to get started. Happy discoveries.

Building Community Through Community Theater

Last week, Rockridge resident Claire Wahrhaftig and I made our way over to the Ashby Stage at 1901 Ashby, across from the BART parking lot. The theater now permanently houses the Shotgun Players. We wanted to catch a performance of Love is a Dream House in Lorin, a beautifully crafted play developed along the concepts of community-based collaborative theatre, a form of theatre developed in the '60s and '70s that has gained popularity nationwide in recent years. It promotes direct artistic collaboration with the community for the greater good of that community.

Written by Marcus Gardley, Love is a Dreamhouse in Lorin was conceived and nurtured in the history of the very turf the theater stands on. Few people know that this area was a separate community known as Lorin in the 1800s, annexed into Berkeley only in the years after the 1906 earthquake. The Shotgun Players, together with local residents, spent months researching the history of this community, which was home to practically every social group not granted entrance into Berkeley proper. The goal was to tell the story of this place as a means of reconnecting the past to the present, thereby forging a stronger sense of community today. How appropriate for a neighborhood that is, as everyone knows by now, poised to change again dramatically in the near future as more high-density housing comes to the area. The message is clear: a community, a neighborhood and the people who live in it cannot thrive without history, without a story. We want to thank the artists and all those wonderful, talented locals for giving that story a voice that cannot be ignored.

Beginning November 29, the Shotgun Players will perform The Forest War, "an ancient play for modern times" written by Mark Jackson, author of The Death of Meyerhold. Call 510/841-6500 or go to www.shotgunplayers.org. You can order tickets online, but you will still have to come an hour early and stand in line for seat assignments, not a good arrangement. We hope that they will come up with a better system soon. We do like their commitment to a sliding scale or "pay what you wish" policy.

Holiday Music

This year's offering from Bella Musica is Bach's magnificent B Minor Mass. Performances are 8 p.m. Friday, December 8, Arlington Community Church, Kensington, and 4 p.m. Sunday, December 10, St. Mary Magdalen Church, 2005 Berryman Street, Berkeley. Bella Musica is directed by Arlene Sagan who also has the Berkeley Community Chorus & Orchestra (BCCO) under her baton. Admission is by nominal donation. Call 510/525-5393 or e-mail info@bellamusica.org. BCCO has one more concert on Sunday, December 17, 4:30 p.m. at St. John the Worker church, 1640 Addison Street, Berkeley. They are performing Leonard Bernstein's Chichester Psalms, Aaron Copland's Old American Songs and works by Julian White: 510/433-9599 or www.bcco.org.

The 2006 Christmas Revels

ere's an invitation to join the Christmas Revelers on a "Theatrical Celebration of the Winter Solstice," held every year at the Scottish Rite Theater, 1547 Lakeside Drive in Oakland. This year's focus is the music, stories, dance and holiday traditions from the dark and wintry forests of late 18thcentury French Canada. Special guest performer Pierre Chartrand of Montréal's Danse Cadence will dazzle you with his magnificent Québecois music and dance. Rockridge resident Theresa Nelson and her daughter Madeleine will again be singing in the chorus. Performances run Friday through Sunday, December 8-10 and 15-17. Performances are at 1 and 5 p.m. on weekends; this is great festivity for the entire family. Order tickets online at www.calrevels.org or call 510/452-9334.

And with that, I leave you to celebrate, enjoy and revel to your heart's content in this darkest time of the year, this season of incredible hope.

Holiday Safety Requires Extra Vigilance Against Crime

Report from the Neighborhood Crime Prevention Council (NCPC)

by Susan Montauk, NCPC Chair

A this time of year, citizens often become nervous about their safety, and with good reason; historically, crime incidents rise at holiday time and people need to take extra precautions. Reports to the Rockridge Neighborhood

Watch Network Yahoo Group from mid-October to mid-November highlight the need to act judiciously and quickly: a pistol-whipping of a guard at the College Avenue Safeway during a robbery attempt, belligerent door-to-door solicitors and a midday armed robbery were recent unnerving incidents.

Knowing how to respond in such situations is your best defense. When two women were robbed of their purses at gunpoint by teenage boys around noon on Miles Avenue November 14, a neighbor who heard their screams dialed 911 from her cell phone, a mistake which cost valuable time. When you dial 911 from a cell phone, your call is routed to California Highway Patrol. After a wait of over five minutes, the witness called 911 on her land line, and several police cars arrived within minutes and apprehended one suspect. The emergency number equivalent to 911 for cell phones is 777-3211; program it into your cell phone.

In general, solicitors operating without special permits from the City of Oakland are operating illegally and, more likely than not, the person showing up at your door has no such permit. In any case, it is best not to open the door to solicitors, be they students selling subscriptions, or others. Use your judgment, of course; if the person is a member or officer of a religious or charitable organization to which you also belong, and is collecting on a volunteer basis, the person does not need a City permit.

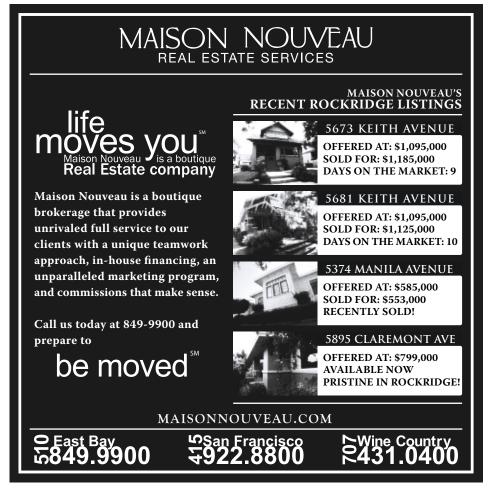

Burglars are looking for easy prey and become especially brazen this time of year, so don't make your house inviting to them. A resident parked in his car in mid-November noticed a young male on a bicycle, 15-17 years old, with dreadlocks, riding along Miles Avenue between Cavour and Clifton, stopping to tug and push on first-story windows of three different houses. If you witness suspicious behavior, call 777-3333, the OPD non-emergency number. If a crime is in progress or imminent, call 911.

The Oakland Police Department provides safety tips on its webstie. Go to http://www.oaklandpolice.com and click on "Avoid Being a Crime Victim."

The Rockridge neighborhood Crime Prevention Council meeting — held the 3rd Tuesday of each month — provides a useful forum for voicing concerns with OPD officers and an opportunity to help set monthly priorities for our Problem Solving Officer. Go to http://www.rockridgencpc.com for meeting details, crime statistics and crime fighting resources.
