The renovation of Rockridge BART Plaza will finally begin construction around mid-April, nine years after being initially conceived as a community vision to improve the area under Highway 24 and the BART tracks on College Avenue.

BART, in partnership with the city of Oakland, the Rockridge Community Planning Council (RCPC), and the Rockridge District Association (RDA), awarded the contract for the project last winter to Golden Bay Construction.

Pastor Casts Bread Upon Parishioners

A few of the St. Augustine parishioners participating in a reverse collection to raise funds for a Kenyan orphanage gather on the steps of the church with Father Mark Wiesner, right rear. Fr. Mark reports the seed money for the project has already been reimbursed by parishioner fundraising projects.

by Don Kinkead

When the collection baskets were passed at St. Augustine Church one recent Sunday, parishioners were surprised to hear Father Mark Wiesner invite them to take from the basket rather than add to it.

There for the taking were small, unlabeled envelopes containing from $15 to $100 each and a letter asking parishioners to “apply creativity, ingenuity and cleverness to multiply and return” the funds for construction of a dormitory for Kenyan orphans. Fr. Mark calls it a reverse collection.

It all began in September 2011, when Fr. Mark spent 18 days in Africa at the invitation of Father Gilbert, an African cleric visiting St. Augustine, located at Alcatraz and Colby.

In his visits to Kenyan leprosy clinics, missions, and hospitals, Fr. Mark saw many areas of great need. The Tonga Parish Mission, in an area hard-hit by the HIV-AIDS epidemic that has orphaned many children, presented a need that he thought St. Augustine could help meet.

The Tonga Parish maintains a children’s care home with two dormitories housing 32 orphans, a fraction of the need. In a field nearby, Fr. Mark saw a foundation for another building that could house 50 more children. However, the Tonga Parish lacked the resources to build it: about $65,000.

Funding the project seemed like an achievable goal to Fr. Mark: “I realized that our parish, our community, could really make a difference in the lives of people by funding the dormitory.”

But how to raise the money? The economy has been hard on many of St. Augustine’s parishioners, who are also asked by the church and the Bishop’s Appeal for additional giving, while living expenses in general continue to rise.

The answer came via a story on the radio about a Baptist church in Texas that had held a reverse collection, starting with $30,000 given to members who returned $150,000 in five weeks.

“I knew we had to build the building. That radio program told me how we actually could,” said Fr. Mark.

He withdrew $12,100 from a church savings account to give to parishioners on the first Sunday of Lent. People will have

RCPC Election 2012: Statements of RCPC Board Candidates

Bernard Baltaxe

63rd Street

My name is Bernard Baltaxe and I am running for the Board because I am impressed with this organization and I want to help it shape the future of Rockridge and Oakland. I am a lawyer that represents employees in workers' compensation cases. I am a member of the Board of Governors of the California Applicant Attorneys' Association and spend significant time advocating for workers' rights to our State Assembly Members and Senators. I also feel strongly about keeping Rockridge and Oakland the great place that it is and even making it better.

My wife and I moved to Rockridge six years ago from San Francisco because we liked the family and progressive atmosphere. We heard about RCPC, but found out that our house was just outside the boundary. Fortunately for us, the boundary has been expanded to include us and we are eager to give back.

Christopher Chin

Incumbent

Christopher Chin has lived in Rockridge for the past twelve years, and in the East Bay for twenty-five years. While he has an engineering degree from U.C. Berkeley, he spent many years after graduation working for the University on its IT systems and infrastructure, including helping to set up the campus-wide wireless network.

Christopher's avid interest in SCUBA diving led him to underwater cinematography and ocean conservation, and he went on to found The Center for Oceanic Awareness, Research, and Education (COARE), where he serves as its executive director. Christopher joined the RCPC Board because he wanted to give something back to his community, and is particularly interested in promoting better communication and participation within the Rockridge community.

Douglas Oliver

Broadway Terrace

Please vote for Douglas Oliver in the RCPC Board of Directors election.

He has degrees in anthropology and architecture, and is an associate at a local architecture and planning firm. Committed to environmental and social issues, he has earned a Leadership of Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) accreditation and worked with Architecture for Humanity in the "Rebuilding Haiti" program.

His extensive professional experience designing communities around the Bay Area has enabled him to recognize characteristics that create better neighborhoods and to offer perceptive observations that provide unique points of view. He believes in facing and evaluating issues in a holistic manner with long term vision and an open mind.

His goals are to:

- Enhance and protect the small-grained character of our neighborhood,
- Protect the environment with sustainable planning,
- Represent and integrate Rockridge as a part of the community in the Bay Area.

With his relevant experience, integrated holistic perspectives, and the desire to contribute, he will be a valuable addition to the board.

Stuart Flashman

Ocean View

Incumbent

Much has changed since I moved to Rockridge in 1992, but it remains a good place to live. I'm now seeking my third term on the RCPC Board to continue working to protect and improve Rockridge.

As a land use attorney, I know that zoning has a lot to do with Rockridge's success. While development can bring benefits, College Avenue's limited traffic capacity means careless development can be disastrous. That's why I've opposed Safeway's oversized expansion plans for its College Avenue store. By contrast, the Rockridge Shopping Center could and should be made more of a center for the North Oakland community.

But RCPC is more than development issues. We support our schools, library, parks, and public safety. We work with local merchants to keep Rockridge a thriving commercial and residential community. Your vote in this election will keep Rockridge moving forward.

James Kachelmeyer

Claremont Avenue

Incumbent

James Kachelmeyer, a Claremont Avenue resident, has served on RCPC since July 2011. After moving to Rockridge in June 2010, he quickly grew to love the neighborhood and volunteered to be a block captain for The Rockridge News. Today he sees his role on the Board as an advocate for the younger residents of Rockridge, including the community's many U.C. Berkeley students, and if elected he plans to push for affordable shopping and dining alternatives, improved transit and bike connections, and stronger ties with the University. James holds a B.A. from the University of Texas and an M.A. in economics from Fordham University. He works for CCIG, an Oakland real estate development and brokerage firm, where he is involved with the Oakland Army Base redevelopment project. His wife is in her first year of a Ph.D. program at U.C. Berkeley, so he looks forward to calling Rockridge home for a while.

Alex Naughton

I would very much appreciate the opportunity to continue serving on the RCPC Board of Directors. This will be my second term, and I feel there

RCPC Land Use Committee

The RCPC Land Use Committee generally meets on the fourth Wednesday of the month at the Rockridge Branch Library, Upstairs Meeting Room, 7:30 p.m. *Change: Next meeting: April 26. Subject to change. Check rockridge.org the preceding week for the full meeting agenda.

COMMITTEE NOTES: The next meeting of the RCPC Land Use Committee is April 26, the fourth Thursday of April (note change of date), 7:30 p.m. at the Rockridge Branch Library. Agenda topics include updates on the Rockridge Shopping Center and College Avenue Safeway projects. Contact Stu Flashman, 652-5373 or chair@rockridge.org, for a copy of the agenda. Land use committee meetings are generally open to the public. NOTE: there will be an executive session for committee members only at the end of this meeting.

Land Use Update as of March 28

by Stuart Flashman, RCPC Land Use Committee chair

■ College Avenue Safeway Shopping Center Project College & Claremont Avenues

City staff and consultants continue to review and revise the roughly 2,000 page administrative draft of comment and response documents for this 62,000 sq. ft. proposed project, which would replace Safeway's current 22,500 sq. ft. store. Committee members noted there had been additional traffic measurements on College Avenue. The committee felt that neither traffic issues nor toxics problems had been adequately addressed in the draft EIR and that the proper course would be to recirculate the revised document for additional public comment. RCPC is retaining legal counsel to advise it.

■ Rockridge Shopping Center Rebuild Project Broadway & Pleasant Valley

The release date for the Draft EIR on this 292,000 sq. ft rebuild/expansion proposal (put forward by Safeway, the master tenant at the site) has again been pushed back. The DEIR might now be released in late summer or fall. The lease for the shopping center's CVS store has been extended to the end of 2012. CVS's management says they will be restocking some areas, but it appears many of the most popular departments, including hardware, housewares, and fabrics, have been permanently eliminated or greatly scaled back.

Representatives of RCPC and other North Oakland neighborhood groups hope to meet soon with Safeway's management to discuss concerns and issues still needing to be addressed in Safeway's proposal.

■ Rockridge Montessori School Expansion Project 5610 Broadway, and

■ College Preparatory School Expansion Project 6100 Broadway

These two private school expansion projects along Broadway would each potentially add traffic, especially morning traffic at the already-congested Broadway/Keith/Patton intersection. Impacted now by the Chabot Elementary School expansion, that intersection will be affected even more by the Caldecott Improvement Project. While RCPC has not yet expressed an opinion on either project, it has submitted comments on both projects asking that cumulative traffic impacts along Broadway be addressed before either project is considered for approval.

The city planner for the Montessori project is Ulla-Britt Jonsson (ujonsson@oaklandnet.com, 238-3322); for the College Preparatory School, it is Aubrey Rose (arose@oaklandnet.com, 238-2071).

is important work to continue. I am looking forward to continuing as the Board's Liaison to the FROG committee, and contributing as the RCPC Board's alternate representative to the Fourth Bore Coalition. If elected, I will work to effectively represent the concerns of Rockridge with particular attention to my neighbors "above" Broadway. Thank you.

Laura Schlichtmann Clifton Street

Incumbent

Appointed to an ARPC board vacancy early this year, I have time and commitment available to serve as a board member, and ask for your vote to let me continue working with the board on issues important to Rockridge.

A fuller statement of my interest and background appeared in February's Rockridge News. The gist: I moved back to Rockridge last year after a decade across the Bay, am now retired and eager to volunteer for Rockridge and Oakland, and see working on the RCPC board as reciprocity for the service of other board members in the past.

Besides my law background, I did graduate work in urban planning, worked in state government for ten years, and have varied experience in dispute resolution.

3rd Annual Pancake Breakfast: Support Claremont Middle School

April 21, Rockridge Masonic Hall

The Oakland-Durant-Rockridge Masonic Lodge #188, Claremont Middle School PTA Dad's Club, and the Rockridge District Association (RDA) are jointly hosting the Third Annual Community Pancake Breakfast at the Rockridge Masonic Hall, 5449 College Avenue, Saturday, April 21. Proceeds from the breakfast support music and fine arts programs and the modern computer lab at Claremont Middle School, a part of the College Avenue community since 1913.

The menu includes pancakes, eggs, sausage, bacon, fruit, coffee and tea. Event tickets are $10 (with a small transaction fee added when purchased online). Tickets are limited and time specific, so purchase yours early. There will be four seatings.

In addition to breakfast, the event opens the meticulously maintained 1926 interior of one of the most prominent buildings on lower College Avenue to diners.

Claremont School musicians will perform in the second floor lounge of the hall under the direction of music teacher Renae Briggs.

Generous contributions of time and food from the Masons permit all breakfast proceeds to be contributed to Claremont programs. This event raised $5,000 for the school last year.

Come for breakfast, meet your neighbors, and tour one of our local architectural treasures while supporting Claremont Middle School.

Get your tickets now for the Pancake Breakfast:

- 1) Purchase tickets online via www.claremontms.org. The Pancake Breakfast link (about the middle of the page) will take you to the website.
- 2) Pay by check payable to Claremont

Middle School PTA. Note on the check that it is for the pancake breakfast and what seating – 8 a.m., 9 a.m., 10 a.m., or 11 a.m. – you would like to attend. Mail your check to – or drop it off at – Claremont Middle School, 5750 College Avenue, Oakland, CA 94618. Checks should be placed in an envelope labeled Claremont Middle School Breakfast. Your name will be placed on the guest list.

3) Contact Patrick Zak at patrickzak@gmail.com to purchase tickets directly.

Things to note

The Two Safeways and Other Rockridge Development Issues

The April Town Hall Meeting agenda includes updates from the RCPC Land Use Committee on the two Rockridge

Safeway projects: the College/Claremont Safeway Shopping Center and the Rockridge Shopping Center rebuild/expansion project. There will be an update on the current status of the environmental review and approval processes for both projects, plus discussion

Caldecott Settlement Projects Examined

by Stuart Flashman, RCPC chair

City staff and consultants joined City Council member Jane Brunner in a public meeting to discuss the first six projects included in Oakland's settlement agreement with Caltrans over the Caldecott Improvement Project, or Fourth Bore.

The goal of the meeting, held March 26 at Kaiser Elementary School, was for participants to tell the city their thoughts on these designs, before the city moves forward to the final pre-construction stage.

The settlement was reached in 2008 after Oakland had objected to the impacts a fourth bore added to the Caldecott Tunnel would have on ▶ Caldecott, page 11

STREET SWEEPER HAD FINISHED; I WAS TICKETED ANYWAY

EDITOR:

I was interested to read the article on the profitability of the "street sweeping program" in the March issue of The Rockridge News. This is in keeping with my view of it as a fund-raising program for the city, with a pleasant side effect of cleaner streets. You may view me as cynical, but I have received two tickets, parking on streets during the designated hours, but AFTER the sweeping had very obviously been done. I was stonewalled in my protest to the city. If it was truly a street sweeping program, I should never have gotten those tickets.

Eyes on Rockridge

Shaking Up a Neighborhood for Its Own Good

by Judith Doner Berne

“We’ve got to put together an emergency kit,” I said to my daughter for the umpteenth time.

But it’s been nine months since we moved to Rockridge and neither my daughter Deborah, who lives with her family a couple of miles away, nor her dad and I have done much about it.

Oh yes, we did the retrofit before we moved in.

And I have a flashlight, a set of keys and an extra pair of contact lenses (I just put those there) in my bedside table. I try to keep a six-pack of bottled water in the pantry.

Lame, I know.

That’s why I’m hoping that Roberta Stern’s enthusiasm and persistence in organizing and educating her Ocean View Drive block will have a domino effect.

“It just takes one person to get something started,” says Stern, a Rockridge resident since 1985.

But even though she experienced the 1989 Loma Prieta Earthquake and the 1991 Berkeley and Oakland Hills fires up close and personal, it took viewing television footage of last year’s Japanese earthquake to shake her into action. “I realized that I had to come out of denial and complacency,” Stern says. And, “maybe it’s that I’m older and also wanted to connect with the people around me.”

Obviously, she wasn’t just thinking about making her own preparations to meet emergencies but also about rallying her neighbors.

Emma Haft, Roberta Stern and Matthew Duplessis feel better prepared for an emergency, partly because Haft and Duplessis have strategically-filled backpacks and Stern keeps keys, whistle and flashlight at her bedside.

It helped that “I saw my cousin organize her neighborhood.” Also, that “I’m a social worker to begin with. I’m used to connecting people.”

Still, “It was overwhelming,” she says.

It was a happy discovery that the city offered free training sessions through its CORE (Citizens of Oakland Respond to Emergencies) program, run by the Oakland Fire Department Office of Emergency Services. But, apparently what was happening in Japan prompted a surge of interest in the program, so it wasn’t until October that CORE volunteer Ben Hamburg presented the first of his two two-hour-plus seminars to the requisite number of people.

According to Stern, “It was a bit of a process to schedule the training. But I found out that if you had 15 people, they’d come to you. I went door to door with flyers – and got some response. But there was also a certain amount of lethargy.”

CORE sessions teach self-reliance skills and help neighborhoods establish response

Celebrate FROG

In October 2001, more than 1,300 volunteers from Rockridge and nearby neighborhoods joined together to work for 10 days from dawn until after dark to build Frog Park's custom-designed play structures in what was called the Big Build.

Up to that time, the area had been a neglected, mostly fenced and heavily weeded patch of land with dilapidated basketball courts, all located under a heavily travelled freeway.

After years of planning and design, the time had come for the final push to bring to life a park in Rockridge. Community volunteers laid hands, hammers and heart on wood, tile, painted butterflies and fencing to complete a park that is now a central community feature.

Without the dedication of the Big Build volunteers and many other dedicated Rockridge and community volunteers, there would be no Frog Park to enjoy.

We will celebrate this gift on Earth Day. Join us Saturday, April 21, for the combined annual Earth Day maintenance activities and to celebrate and commemorate the people who made Frog Park and the play structures possible. — Carol Behr, FROG chair

Next FROG Meeting: April 12
Rockridge Library, Thursday, April 12, 7:30 p.m. Join with neighbors who care about Frog Park. Plus: We are seeking volunteers for the Earth Day and FROG anniversary celebration. E-mail info@frogpark.org

Coming FROG Events and Opportunities

A number of FROG activities are in the 2012 pipeline, including volunteer-led park maintenance, a community survey to review and discuss park improvement priorities, and working with other community groups to implement related projects.

Also, FROG and many DMV-area neighbors continue work to respond to the unannounced tree cutting at the DMV area.

Restoration plans are moving forward with the DMV; the agency has begun to plant replacements for the five trees removed from the parking lot near Miles and Cavour.

E-mail info@frogpark.org for more information and to get involved with projects that utilize your expertise or those that involve the whole family.

Radishes Front and Center

Radishes are one of those vegetables that look so beautiful on the market shelf and yet are seldom used by home chefs. We are not immediately drawn to the sharp, peppery biting flavor of radishes. When I do use radishes, it is mainly to add color and texture to a salad.

On a recent stroll through our local farmer's market, I saw a number of lovely varieties of radishes in addition to the familiar red globes. In the U.S., radishes are usually eaten raw, but they can also be steamed, sautéed, and stir-fried. The green tops are edible and offer a peppery taste to salads. I began to wonder how, other than as a color splash, other varieties can be prepared to add a bit of zip to a dish.

Radish varieties are generally categorized by color and shape. Black radishes have a rough black skin with a hot-flavored white flesh and are found in both round and elongated forms. Often sold in Russian or Polish neighborhoods, black radishes are typically served in Russian and Polish dishes.

One upscale preparation that is sure to impress is to arrange black radishes in a small dish accompanied by a variety of coarse salts for dipping – such as smoked sea salt, Hawaiian pink salt, and French gray salt – very Russian. The combination of the peppery radish and salt makes a nice before-dinner appetizer.

Daikon radishes are native to Asia and are cucumber shaped. Their white flesh is juicy and hotter than red globes but milder than black ones. Daikons are prepared for numerous Japanese salads and soups. They can be steamed with shredded carrots and dressed with Asian vinaigrette made with rice wine vinegar and sesame oil.

A somewhat new variety on the scene is the watermelon radish. Watermelon radishes are slightly larger than the traditional red globe with a green outer skin and pink to red flesh radiating out from the center – so beautiful. I like to cut them into thin rounds and then semi-circles to resemble tiny watermelons to garnish a green salad.

The color contrast is wonderful.

Finally, there is the French breakfast or icicle radish. They are shaped like small carrots with a mild and juicy taste. French breakfast radishes spruce up any simple salad.

Most radishes are available year-round with peak season in the spring. Look for fresh, brightly colored radishes that are firm, tender, and have crisp unblemished skins. I always buy my radishes with the tops attached. Do not remove tops from radishes as they will rapidly spoil if you do. Red radishes and daikons will keep up to two weeks in the refrigerator. Black radishes can be stored for months.

The extra benefit of eating radishes is their nutritional value. They are very high in vitamin C and only 20 calories in a cup.

This month's recipe is one we enjoyed in Fez, Morocco. It is an excellent before-dinner appetizer.

Radishes with Harissa

Harissa is a North African spice blend and also found in a paste form.

It is available at the Pasta Shop.

Ingredients

- 4 tablespoons unsalted butter softened to room temperature
- 1 tablespoon harissa spice (dry preferred) salt and pepper
- 2 cups of halved French breakfast radishes
- 1 tablespoon minced Italian flat parsley
- Smoked sea salt (available at Trader Joe's)

Preparation

Combine butter and harissa in small bowl and mix until well combined. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Set aside in a sauté pan over medium heat, sauté the radishes with a few tablespoons of water for about 3 minutes or until slightly soft. • Toss in the parsley; add salt and pepper to taste. • Add about 2 tablespoons of the harissa butter and a pinch of the smoked sea salt; cook until butter just melts. • Add additional harissa butter to taste.

BRT on Telegraph Meets Skeptical Audience

by Stuart Flashman, RCPC chair

When AC Transit held its meeting on March 6 to present its proposed Bus Rapid Transit (BRT) project for Telegraph Avenue, it played host to a feisty audience that called for more of a public exchange of information than meeting planners may have had in mind.

The already controversial project would convert one traffic lane in each direction of Telegraph to dedicated bus-only lanes. The lanes would close off through access on a number of residential streets that cross Telegraph, forcing drivers going in the east-west direction to the main streets still allowing through traffic.

Also, a large number of on-street parking spaces along Telegraph would be eliminated to make room for the bus lanes and boarding stations. This has particularly alarmed Temescal District merchants, and rumblings have been heard of a possible lawsuit against AC Transit and the city if the project is approved. RCPC has expressed concern about the spill-over of the increased congestion to residential streets east of Telegraph and ultimately College Avenue.

On the positive side, the project would provide more prominent and easier to use bus stations, instead of the current bus stops, AC Transit representatives said. It would speed bus travel with pre-boarding ticket purchase and signal override so busses would not be backed-up at red lights.

After a short PowerPoint presentation explaining major elements of the project, attendees were to have clustered around tables where detailed route maps had been arrayed. AC Transit staff members were distributed throughout the room to answer questions and respond to comments. This arrangement troubled a number of vocal audience members, who demanded AC Transit allow comments to be addressed to the meeting as a whole, so everyone could hear attendees' comments and the agency's responses. A compromise was reached and a small number of comments ("requests for clarifications") were aired prior to participants gathering in smaller groups around the tables.

Permeating the entire session was the knowledge that the project's just-released Final Environmental Impact Statement/Report (FEIS/R) included a new project alternative. Dubbed the Downtown Oakland to San Leandro (or DOSL – pronounced "docile") alternative, it would extend BRT from San Leandro along International Boulevard (E. 14th Street) north to 20th Street in Oakland, just south of Grand Avenue. The existing 1 and 1R service would continue from that point north to Berkeley.

While the DOSL alternative wouldn't bring major service improvements to North Oakland and Berkeley, neither would it bring the project's major impacts. Also, it would be cheaper than the full BRT project, and might actually fit within AC Transit's current budget. While there was no official confirmation, and a final decision will be made by the AC Transit board and Oakland City Council, transit staff candidly admitted that the approved project was much more likely to be DOSL than full BRT.

Watch for future AC Transit and City Council meetings, where the decisions will be made later this spring.

bicyclists. RCPC expressed concern about the loss of on-street parking spaces in the section of Broadway between Brookside and Golden Gate, which could put additional pressure on parking spaces on the residential streets.

Fact sheets on the 6 projects are available for review on the Fourth Bore Coalition's web site via: <http://tinyurl.com/7yncyak>.

Council Member Brunner's office also announced it would host a meeting later in the spring to begin the public process for considering whether soundwalls are warranted for some portions of Highway 24 in Rockridge. Consideration of soundwalls was another element of the settlement.

More information will be provided in the May issue of the Rockridge News.

Utilizing Law Enforcement Resources

Making it Tough on Crime: Hardening the Target

by NCPC board members

Officer Maureen Vergara, Problem Solving Officer (PSO) for Rockridge's Beat 12Y (below College Avenue), announced at the March 8 Greater Rockridge Neighborhood Crime Prevention Council (GRNCPC) meeting that PSOs are able to do street security assessment and problem analysis.

Vergara said she and Jo Balaoro, Rockridge's PSO for Beat 13X (above College Avenue), and Patricia Rose, the assigned neighborhood services coordinator, could make appointments with residents to review their properties and point out areas vulnerable to thieves.

It is called Crime Prevention Through Environmental Design (CPTED). Its goal is to make the physical environment unattractive to criminals casing a neighborhood by designing or revising the design of a physical environment to decrease the ability of a criminal to commit a crime, to increase the chance that a crime would be seen by legitimate citizens, to reduce the fear of crime and to improve the quality of life.

Officer Vergara would like as many neighbors as possible to participate at the same appointment; an entire block may work together to keep thieves off its street.

Contact NSC Patricia Rose at prose@oaklandnet.com to see how you may benefit from OPD's expertise. If you do not have time to organize an appointment, the Greater Rockridge NCPC's website, rockridgencpc.com has a detailed document about CPTED, under the drop-down menu "Resources/OPD Security Brochures."

When a missing library door key almost derailed the March NCPC meeting, resourceful board members started looking for a restaurant near the library that might have a meeting room. Hudson restaurant said they had a back room and would have provided it but it was already in use. Restaurant Chu, next door to the library, was able to make their upstairs area available on short notice, even serving a large tray of ice water and tea to the many meeting attendees. Frank Castro, NCPC chair, and board members were pleased to note the ready generosity of Hudson and of Restaurant Chu.

the North Oakland community. Of the six projects, four are in the North Hills area north of Highway 24 along Tunnel Road and Caldecott Lane, while two involve the upper section of Broadway east of Brookside Road in Rockridge. The two Rockridge projects would improve the pedestrian path and add bicycle lanes along Broadway.

After the city's presentation and discussion of plans for the six projects, the meeting was opened to audience comments and questions.

Most concerns centered on the North Hills projects, especially their impacts on until the Feast of Pentecost, May 25 and 26 – about 90 days overall – to develop their projects, multiply the seed money, and return the seed money and its gains to the church orphanage project.

“The excitement has been phenomenal,” the pastor reported in mid-March, citing several examples:

- Four women held a garage sale on 64th Street, earning $864 without even using their seed money,

- A 10-year-old parishioner used her $25 to raise $184 with a lemonade stand. Congratulated by Fr. Mark, she said, “Oh, I’m not done yet!”

- A man bought $25 worth of candy to sell at work, raising $150, and

- Twenty parishioners are planning an artisan faire to be held on the church grounds.

Fr. Mark said, “A part of the project is to encourage the parish community to involve the wider Rockridge neighborhood,” and expand the reach of the project.

It reached even further than that. A woman living back East saw the story on the church’s Facebook page. Out of work, she could not contribute money, but she designed a logo for the program. People from New York, Ohio, Iowa and other states, through the PayPal portal on the church web site, contributed more than $500 toward the project in its first four days.

Excited by the response to the program – the resourcefulness participants have shown, the creativity they have unleashed, and the sense of capability they have developed – Fr. Mark is not worried about its ultimate outcome.

“Regardless of our success,” the pastor said, “the good this project is already accomplishing makes it worth doing.”

teams until that help arrives.

“It was excellent, excellent training,” Stern says. “He gave us the ‘how to’ on organizing the neighborhood.”

Even more neighbors showed up for the second session, buoyed perhaps by the fact that “we had had a series of earthquakes,” she says.

Meanwhile, Matthew Duplessis, Emma Haft, Jamie Pillers and Ken Wong signed on to be part of a neighborhood emergency preparedness committee. “Now I don’t feel so alone,” Stern says.

An early step was to get a roster of all the households, their e-mails and phone numbers. With approximately 50 dwellings involved, which include homeowners as well as tenants, “We are still in process,” Stern says.

Another was to bring in a consultant to discuss earthquake retrofitting and automatic gas shutoff valves. “We’re working on a gas safety plan for the neighborhood,” Haft says. “One of the main fears is fire.”

“If we can identify everyone’s gas shutoff valve, we can help each other,” Duplessis adds.

You could feel a definite momentum, Stern says. “It’s very exciting. I have met so many people I didn’t know and we also discovered a lot of people with skills in our neighborhood.”

They included three doctors, a nurse, someone with firefighting training and another with construction experience. “You need to have a medical team,” she says.

Another neighbor offered to store extra water and tools in his basement, for which they are collecting equipment. “It can be our control and medical center.”

Haft acknowledges that having experts outline the area’s vulnerability has led to some sleepless nights. But, “I feel better knowing more people on my street and that we will look out for each other.”

Their communication list has already been important in publicizing some recent muggings, car thefts and a scam attempt on their street. “We have a little crime watch committee that has come out of this,” Stern says. “We are also encouraging everyone to leave their porch lights on overnight.”

Stern is happy to talk to anyone interested in getting an emergency preparedness program started in his or her neighborhood. You can e-mail her at rozydeco50@hotmail.com.

Getting the initial word out is hardest, Duplessis says. It might have been helpful if their neighborhood hadn’t discontinued its annual block party – which there is talk of resuming. “You could have a table set up.”

“The big message,” Stern emphasizes, “is DON’T WAIT.”

Coincidentally, CORE emergency training sessions are scheduled at the Rockridge Branch Library on the following dates in May:

- Wednesday, May 2, 6:30-9 p.m. (CORE 1),
- Wednesday, May 9, 6:30-9 p.m. (CORE 2), and
- Wednesdays, May 16, 23 and 30, 6-9 p.m. (CORE 3; A, B, and C).
- Note: A CORE 3 Hands-On class will be held Saturday, June 2, 9:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m., at the OFD training facility, 250 Victory Court.

For specifics, and to enroll, call the CORE program at 510/238-6351, visit its website at www.oaklandcore.org or e-mail core@oaklandnet.com.

I just might see you there.

■ 21st Amendment Beer Emporium (name subject to change): 5330 College Avenue

The owners of the 21st Amendment Brewery bar and restaurant in San Francisco, who already have their offices on the second floor at this Oakland address, propose a store to sell exotic and micro-brewed beers on the first floor. According to co-owner Shawn O'Sullivan (shaun@21st-Amendment.com) who attended the meeting, the operation would be similar to that of wine shops that allow tasting, rather than being a conventional bar. The business would feature a beer-tasting area where customers could open and drink some of the beer they had bought and sample unusual beers on tap and available in 6-ounce servings for tasting.

The business would need permits from the Alcoholic Beverage Commission and a minor conditional use permit from the city. No applications have been submitted. The Committee strongly suggested that the owners discuss the proposal with their College Avenue neighbors, and with Bryant Avenue residents, before moving forward. After discussion, the Committee voted to recommend that RCPC not oppose the proposal. The recommendation will be considered by the RCPC board at its April meeting.
