Residents Hear Plans for Safeway Reconstruction

by Gloria Bruce, RCPC Secretary

A backlash against sushi bars and Starbucks and pleas to protect neighborhood businesses were just a few of the opinions expressed at RCPC's June town hall meeting on Safeway's proposal to rebuild its store at College and Claremont avenues.

At the well-attended gathering, Todd Paradis of Safeway's real estate team briefly outlined tentative plans to rebuild the 23,000 square-foot store. He said the company has not yet filed a formal application with the city, has no architectural plans and wants input from the community before drafting a proposal. Though exact size, design, or number of parking spaces will not be determined for some time, he said that residents could expect a larger store footprint, structured parking (likely above the store), and a more transparent frontage along College Avenue. Paradis estimates the store will reopen in mid- to late 2010.

Some residents at the meeting opposed the idea of an in-store sushi bar or Starbucks, but many liked the idea of a welcoming streetscape along College Avenue, with windows or entrances replacing the existing '60s-era blank stone wall. They also said that new amenities like a bakery, pharmacy, or expanded produce section should

School District Approves Chabot School Master Plan

Environmentally sustainable design underway

by Jennifer Edmister, RCPC boardmember

Chabot Elementary is on its way to having a new facility that will replace most of the 18 temporary classrooms that currently house many of its students during the school day. With $13.5 million of the 2006 Measure B funds allotted to Chabot, the Oakland Unified School District (OUSD) recently approved a final master plan for the campus. Having established the general layout, a team from Beverly Prior Architects has worked closely with the school and its long-range planning committee to develop a schematic design.

Working under new sustainability guidelines recently adopted by OUSD, the Chabot team will spend the next few months planning schematic elements like the size of the classrooms, the design of mechanical systems, and the efficient use of natural daylight, energy and water. The new guidelines require the school to be designed and built according to criteria established by the Collaborative for High Performing Schools (CHPS).

Studies show that meeting CHPS criteria has an unmistakable positive impact on school performance. Students who learn in CHPS classrooms have been shown to have higher test scores, reduced absenteeism, and lower rates of

Requiem for a Redwood

A giant Rockridge redwood tree is felled on the summer solstice

Several weeks ago one of my neighbors told me that a landowner several properties down the street had applied for a permit to cut down our local landmark redwood tree, which dominates our block. It is probably over one hundred feet high and is possibly one hundred years old. I called the telephone contact number on the public notice posted on the telephone pole and was told that, yes, the owner had applied for a tree-cutting permit because the tree's roots were beginning to affect his duplex's foundation.

Yesterday, I saw a long row of orange traffic cones near the redwood tree, and I knew that this magnificent specimen was doomed. This morning, several workers armed with ropes and chain saws showed up and in a few short hours cut all the branches and greenery from the tree and fed them into a noisy chipping machine.

This ancient redwood had two main trunks that separated about 20 feet above the ground, in the manner of the El Palo Alto, the twin-branched redwood tree that grows along the San Francisquito Creek at the northern boundary of Palo Alto. The City of Palo Alto is named after this tree, which in Spanish loosely translates as "tall tree."

In the early evening, I walked down the street and took a picture of the still intact massive base of the tree. I gathered up a couple of small leftover redwood branches and put them in water, so now my kitchen has a slight Christmasy smell. Tonight in the dimming light of dusk, I took final pictures of what was left of this magnificent redwood. Several small birds, possibly house finches, fluttered up to perches on the rough bark, then gave up and flew off to a large chestnut tree in the next yard as their new night roosting spot.

The log sections of this redwood tree were not saved to be turned into fine lumber; they were merely cut into large chunks that the workers carried to the waiting truck. This tall tree shaded part of my garden for a couple of hours each day in the wintertime, and I will miss its stately presence as a neighborhood landmark. In the fog-free evenings that we had actual sunsets, this redwood used to glow radiantly in the fading sunset.

Library Seeks Student Volunteers

by Erica Siskind

If you are 11 to 16 years old, if you like talking with younger kids, if you like helping people, if you like being in the library, and if you have about three hours a week during July or August to spare, we need you. The Rockridge branch library needs student volunteers to help run the Summer Reading Program and to help out with other library tasks.

Your job may include explaining the reading game to kids, helping them keep track of the reading they've done, giving out prizes, making phone calls to raffle winners, and helping library staff with stamping, labeling, sorting, photocopying, craft projects and setting up and putting away after special events. It is an unpaid, volunteer position.

We are located at 5366 College Avenue, and we're open the following hours:
Monday and Tuesday: 12:30 - 8
Wednesday, Thursday, Saturday: 10 - 5:30
Friday: 12 - 5:30 Sunday: Closed

To get details and sign up, call Erica Siskind or Gay Ducey at 597-5017

RCPC Establishes Planning and Project Review Committee

by Ronnie Spitzer, RCPC Chairwoman

To better represent the Rockridge community and respond in a timely and professional manner to new project proposals, the board is restructuring the Land Use Committee as the Planning and Project Review Committee (PPRC), a technical working group of board-appointed members with expertise in planning, architecture, and land-use legal issues.

The PPRC will review and analyze project proposals for compliance with the Oakland General Plan and applicable zoning, and assess their merits from an architectural and urban design perspective. The committee will bring the results of its review to the RCPC board for discussion and further action. The board has appointed Richard Smith to chair the PPRC, replacing interim land use Chairwoman Gloria Bruce. The board is developing guidelines for prospective members.

Open communication is a priority for the RCPC board; it is of the utmost importance to keep the Rockridge community involved and informed and to hear community views on proposed projects. Thus, the board will reinstitute monthly Town Hall meetings open to the Rockridge community. PPRC findings will be presented in each monthly RCPC Town Hall meeting to seek broader community input. Separate community meetings will be scheduled when the Town Hall forum is not available. The Rockridge News will publish monthly status reports on projects being reviewed by the PPRC and the schedule of monthly meetings.

If you have any questions or comments about this proposed restructuring, contact Ronnie Spitzer at rcpcchair@rockridge.org.

Project Updates from the Planning & Project Review Committee

by Richard W. Smith, RCPC Planning and Project Review chair

■ Hauser Creekside - Global Video/5132 Telegraph

The Planning Commission's Design Review Committee (DRC) heard comments, took testimony on, and passed this project, sending it to the full commission. The RCPC board sent a letter to the commission, and R. W. Smith read excerpts during public testimony. RCPC Chairwoman Ronnie Spitzer argued for a reduction in bulk and scale and the inclusion of an effective extension of the Frog Park Greenway. Other concerns were height, intensity of development and lack of adequate parking.

In addition, RCPC noted the severe impacts on the Claremont Towers Apartments, a 40-unit apartment building with affordable rents immediately adjacent to the proposed project on Claremont. These impacts include deep shadowing of windows, view blockage, and noise from the proposed trash pickup loading area only 10 feet from the existing building. This apartment building is an important asset to the Rockridge area.

Several weeks after the DRC hearing, the Hauser team gave a presentation to the RCPC board. In answer to the concerns listed above, Hauser said everything is on the table for discussion. The Planning Commission will hear the issue, probably in August.

■ Kingfish Co-Housing Project

RCPC's PPRC Committee is reviewing the Kingfish proposal, which fronts on both Telegraph and Claremont avenues and includes an adjacent property on Claremont. Tentative concerns include the height and intensity of development and the associated impacts on the livability and developability of neighboring properties. On completion of its review, the committee will provide comments to the Planning Commission prior to the July 18 hearing.

■ 5253 College Avenue

On June 19, the City Council denied neighbors' appeal of the CEQA exemption claimed by staff for the 5253 College Avenue project.

The Planning Commission's approval of the project itself was not deemed eligible for appeal, so the council did not consider project design changes. The neighbors have filed a lawsuit.

■ Zoning Update Committee - Lower Temescal Corridor

The Zoning Update Committee (ZUC) of the Planning Commission has been working on a revision to the General Plan and the zoning of parcels along Telegraph, 41st Street to Alcatraz; Shafter, 45th to the Highway 24 freeway; and Claremont, Telegraph to Cavour Street. Planning staff presented the proposed changes at the ZUC hearing on June 20. During public commentary, RCPC Chairwoman Ronnie Spitzer expressed concern about the proposed height, developer bonuses, and rezoning Claremont from C-28 to C-30. RCPC objects to C-30 because it does not provide for neighborhood-oriented commercial facilities, allows for an excessive increase in building height, and does not set an appropriate image for future developments along Claremont, which the organization views as a gateway to Rockridge. RCPC is now pursuing an offer by Planning Commissioner Doug Boxer to walk the area with interested residents.

DREYER'S AGREED TO ALWAYS KEEP AN ICE CREAM PARLOR, DIDN'T THEY?

EDITOR:

It has been several months now since the Rockridge area lost both the Double Rainbow and the Dreyer's ice cream shops. Dreyer's has had a sign posted since the shop closed saying "closed for remodeling." My kids sent a letter to Dreyer's recently asking them to please reopen the College Avenue store, for all the reasons we'd all like to have an ice cream shop in the area. Dreyer's responded recently, telling them, "I am sorry to inform you that we have no future plans as of yet to reopen that store, but I will forward your remarks to the Marketing Department." They enclosed a few coupons for $.50 off ice cream in the grocery store, hardly the same as walking into the ice cream shop, surveying all the flavors and then enjoying your chosen treat on the spot.

Some people to whom I've relayed this information have told me that part of the conditional use permit for the Dreyer's offices on College Avenue was the maintenance of a retail outlet. Is this true? Was the condition voided when Nestle took over? It would be great if RCPC could help the kids of north Oakland, young and old, regain a neighborhood ice cream shop.

— Jody London

EDITOR'S NOTE:

The Dreyer's project application in 1989 provided for ground-level retail/commercial space along the College Avenue side of the building — something RCPC had fought for since 1985. The City's planners, in their analysis, assumed that most of the retail space would be devoted to food service uses, but such uses were not specifically addressed in the permit conditions. The company did give informal assurances that an ice cream parlor would be included; however, the ice cream parlor was never mandatory.

A Big 'Thank You' To My Rockridge Neighbors

I want, first, to acknowledge the wonderful article which Ortrun Niesar wrote for the June issue of The Rockridge News, highlighting my philosophy and work in Rockridge and greater Oakland while pastoring the College Avenue Presbyterian Church the past 34 years. Time goes by so fast!

I want to express, following all of the special services and statements accorded me, how much they were appreciated by Beth and me and our College Avenue Church family. It feels surreal not to be doing what I've always been doing. But, as those much older than I have offered, live the next stretch in a very focused way and thus achieve what couldn't have been achieved when responding to so many agendas at once. I will take the advice of my elders.

Beth and I plan to live in Rockridge and offer support where most useful in our City of Oakland, where two of our three kids also live. Beth will continue managing the Folks Art store on Piedmont Avenue, and I particularly mean to be available to encourage pastors, teachers and community leaders who are working so hard to make a difference in the lives of our larger community.

Again, thank you for your care, respect, support and involvement in all the activities that we accomplished together over these many years.

— Pastor Bill Beatty

not compete with the independent businesses on the other side of College. Traffic and architecture were further concerns. Several attendees advocated strongly for the closure or consolidation of driveways on College, citing the tangle of cars, buses, bikes and pedestrians at its intersection with 63rd Street. Others urged Paradis to ensure that any rebuild be environmentally sustainable and honor the neighborhood's modest scale.

Paradis said audience suggestions for mixed use reconstruction and leasing stores to independent businesses on the site were unlikely to occur, but that he would not rule anything out. Some neighbors, while requesting more efficient use of space and better service, expressed affection for the existing Safeway's size, neighborly feel and affordable products. Overall, the tone of the discussion was respectful and the group thanked Safeway for conducting community outreach before submitting specific plans.

Paradis closed by promising further opportunities for input, and introduced a new website — www.safewayoncollege.com — where people can make suggestions and get updates.

Rockridge Kitchen Tour Advance Tickets on Sale Now!

by Jennifer Edmister

The 2007 Rockridge Kitchen Tour is almost here. Our selection committee spent months considering a record number of kitchens—almost twice as many as ever before—and the winners include a wide sampling of the neighborhood’s finest. This year’s kitchens run the gamut from cozy bungalow kitchens to grand-scale modern kitchens in larger homes. Don’t miss the bright, spacious kitchen with a glass floor illuminating the stairway below and a stunning three-bridge view; or the impeccably appointed Craftsman, remarkably true to the period, with a stove that will make you look twice; and certainly visit the contemporary kitchen with an Asian flair and an unexpected twist.

While you are strolling the neighborhood and enjoying refreshments, don’t forget that the Kitchen Tour is RCPC’s primary fundraiser. Net proceeds allow RCPC to continue coordinating resources and funding to improve our neighborhood.

Buy Discounted Tickets Now

Advance purchase tickets are available now for $30, and day-of-tour tickets will be available for $40. There are two convenient ways to order tickets. To order by

Or order online beginning mid-July, at www.rockridge.org. Click on “Rockridge Kitchen Tour,” and follow the easy online payment directions. Then, save the confirmation number you receive via e-mail. Beginning August 21 discounted tickets will be on sale in Rockridge at Maison d’Être, 5640 College Avenue.

Docents Needed

If you’d rather join the fun behind the scenes, the Rockridge Kitchen Tour still needs docents. Docents, who guide guests through each of our featured kitchens, receive a pre-tour of three kitchens and will have an opportunity to visit the remaining kitchens—with a free ticket—either before or after their shift on the day of the event. If you would like to be a docent, please call Nancy Sale at 655-4625.

Brochure Advertising

Many tour guests are looking for both inspiration and resources to assist them in future renovation projects. To that end, we furnish a brochure with advertising space — an excellent way to reach an interested and enthusiastic audience. All space must be reserved this month, in order to meet our printing deadlines. Please contact Jo Ellis at joellis1@hotmail.com or after 12 noon at 653-3210.

Crime in Rockridge: 'the Good, the Bad, and the Ugly'

by Janet Somers

Saying she would talk about "the good, the bad, and the ugly," North Oakland City Councilwoman Jane Brunner told a standing-room-only crowd of about 150 people at the Rockridge library that crime in Rockridge is the worst she's seen in 40 years.

The June 13 meeting, featuring panelists from the Oakland Police Department and the Alameda County District Attorney's office, was held by the Greater Rockridge Neighborhood Crime Prevention Council (NCPC) in response to surging crime.

Rockridge has suffered 19 robberies so far this year, up from 12 at this point last year, according to NCPC chairwoman Susan Montauk, who obtained the statistics from the Oakland Police Department. In Temescal, there was a 400% increase in burglaries and, in North Oakland overall, a 110% increase in robberies "on the street, with guns and knives, at all times of day," Brunner told the crowd.

Brunner, a Rockridge resident, said that within the past four months her husband was held up at gunpoint in broad daylight on his way to BART and a burglar broke into her house while her son was home.

Brunner acknowledged that a robbery suppression effort by police is beginning to pay off. (At press time, one suspect thought to be responsible for over a dozen armed robberies in North Oakland had been arrested.) But she demanded better answers and a long-range plan from the police department.

"I can advocate, I can beg, and I can fight, and I've done all three of those," she said. "We need an overall plan from the chief so every time there's a problem we don't have to fight for more cops. We need more investigators. We need to keep the CRTs [Crime Reduction Teams] in North Oakland so they're not just temporary. We hear excuses: the settlement agreement [after the "Riders" case], the vacancies. There can be no more excuses. We all deserve to be able to walk during the day in our own neighborhoods."

People at the meeting expressed outrage, fear and frustration over the increase in crime and a perceived lack of police response.

"Burglaries have become so low on the priority list that you don't even show up," one man said, a complaint that was voiced by several people.

Deputy Chief Jeff Israel acknowledged the problem. "It's not that I don't want to respond," he said. But he said OPD lacks the manpower to pursue "cold cases," where the perpetrator has already left.

Sgt. Ron Lighton of the criminal investigations division said criminals are moving into Rockridge as a result of crime suppression efforts elsewhere in the city. "You turn on the lights in one room and the roaches run to another one," he said.

But Chief Wayne Tucker said OPD is "not trying to police this city at the expense of Rockridge." He said the increase in crime here is not so dramatic when viewed from the standpoint of the absolute numbers, especially compared with other areas of the city.

Lack of police manpower – only 730 of the OPD's 803 officer positions are currently filled – and a high attrition rate (5.9 officers per month, according to Tucker) is an ongoing problem. But OPD has 25 more cops this year, Tucker said. About two dozen officers were set to graduate from the academy on June 27 and more recruits will join academies in July and August. The academy's 35% attrition rate is also a continuing problem, Tucker said. (Last week, Tucker kept a promise made at the meeting by announcing the move of 15 officers from the airport back to the streets.)

Tucker also said that because of the "Riders" settlement agreement 27 officers are assigned to the internal affairs division, in contrast to only 10 investigators citywide in homicide, eight in robbery and eight in assaults. Brunner said her office disagrees that 27 internal affairs officers are mandated by the agreement and wants more of them on the street. Tucker estimated at the meeting that the OPD would be out from under the agreement by the end of the year. However, last week it was extended through January 2010, according to OPD chief of staff Sgt. Michael Poirier.

At the meeting, Tucker announced his frequently-touted plan to reorganize the police department into three geographical rather than time-based assignments, a model that has reduced crime in New York and other cities by increasing accountability. But the police officers' union is fighting the plan because the implementation currently proposed would require officers to work three 12-hour shifts per week. The longer shifts would reduce overhead and overtime costs, OPD Deputy Chief Jeff Israel told

The Rockridge News.

Deputy District Attorney John Creighton told the meeting audience that OPD is operating under "extraordinarily difficult" circumstances. "They are triaging most of the time," he said. Despite that, he said the criminal justice system is "not breaking down." Last year, the DA's office prosecuted 200 felonies with a 94% conviction rate. (A plan announced at the meeting to deputize city attorney personnel to prosecute misdemeanors will not be adopted by the city this year because of costs.)

North Oakland commander Lt. Jim Meeks ended the meeting with a ray of hope.

"We just arrested seven people, including a three-striker wanted for multiple robberies," he said. "We're partnering with the California Highway Patrol and BART. We met with Youth Uprising; these local rap artists are committed to helping us. We're trying to make it safer for you today. We are 100% committed to make this a safe community, and we're going to do that. But it's not going to happen overnight."

Summer:

Leave No Body Inside

Summer is here! What a glorious time of the year. The weather is great, so far. Rockridge has never looked more beautiful and lush, thanks to our marvelous local gardeners. Yes, it's time to get outside. Ride a bike, walk the dog, jog! There are trails to be discovered all over Rockridge and the Claremont Canyon Hills, none more than a few minutes from your doorstep. Plan a picnic. Sleep in a tent. Stick your feet into the bay. Or, if nothing else, just hit an outdoor café.

Local outdoor cultural activities to consider this summer include the Annual Oakland Heritage Alliance Walking Tours scheduled every weekend July through September. Call OHA at 510/763-9218 or e-mail them at info@oaklandheritage.org. Woodminster Amphitheater, one of Oakland's hidden treasures in Joaquin Miller Park, will be presenting "West Side Story" July 13-22 with a cast studded with local talent. Arrive at sunset and bring a picnic supper. Performances begin at 8 p.m. (www.woodminster.com) At the other end of the Caldecott Tunnel, Bruns Shakespeare Theater at Gateway in Orinda will be offering a more varied program this year. Bernard Shaw's "Man and Superman" will be performed in July (www.calshakes.org).

Announcing Rockridge Projects

Three Rockridge projects listed below are in the works. These are projects in which you the readers have expressed an interest. We are very excited about working on them with you and would like to take the months of July and August for some planning. Please get in touch with me promptly if you have an interest in joining us. My contact information is oniesar@sbcglobal.net or 510/652-6664.

Annual Rockridge Photography Show (October 1-30)

All levels of experience are welcome. We are also looking for an organizer this year.

The Spoken Voice

Oral History and Storytelling Workshops with Gay Ducey (fall). Help us capture local stories. Dates for workshop to be worked out.

Poets and Writers of Rockridge

(Beginning in the fall.) We plan to feature our many writers in The Rockridge News and in possibly organizing neighborhood readings.

Indian Cooking: It's All in the Spices

An interview with Rockridge chef Ruta Kahate

In the home of Ruta Kahate, chef, cooking teacher and cookbook author, I met with her and her two charming daughters to talk about her new cookbook, "5 Spices, 50 Dishes: Simple Indian Recipes Using Five Common Spices" (Chronicle Books, 2007). Ruta teaches regional Indian cooking in her Rockridge home on Alcatraz Avenue and has been featured on the Fine Living TV Network.

Barry Kaufman: Congratulations on your recent write-up in the "Chronicle Pairing Guide," where you help the experts decide on what wines go best with Indian cuisine. By the way, I made your tangy shredded cabbage salad and mussels in green curry. Both were excellent. Who influenced your interest in cooking?

Ruta Kahate: Both of my parents enjoyed cooking and were very supportive of me when I started cooking at 11. During the summer my brother and I used to cook lunch together. I came to America wanting to be the first woman pilot for an Indian airline. But after I got my pilot's license, I became disillusioned and decided to become a professional cook.

BK: Indian cooking, like so many of the other great world cuisines including Chinese or Italian, is highly regionalized. Where do you see yourself in the regional diversity of Indian cooking?

RK: I try to draw upon all of the regions of India. India is a very large country with incredible culinary diversity. However, all Indian cooking is deeply rooted in the Hindu sacred Veda texts. When I go back to India, I try to find grandmothers, local cooks and professional chefs to learn new recipes. I always follow the basic recipe and then make changes to meet my own taste.

BK: Who is the audience for your book?

RK: The book is for people who like to cook and want to explore the basics of Indian cuisine. Rather than novices, the book is intended for cooks who have some familiarity with the basic Indian spices available at Safeway. The recipes don't require a trip to an Indian market for exotic ingredients.

BK: How do you teach your students to cultivate their own culinary instincts rather than slavishly follow a recipe?

RK: I try to teach my students that Indian cooking is more than just a recipe. It is about a culture and a centuries-old way of life. The book introduces home cooks to the five most basic Indian spices: coriander and mustard seeds, cumin, ground cayenne and turmeric. I have students grind and taste each spice to make a garam masala. I encourage those who read my book to experiment with different combinations of the five basic spices. I also teach students basic cooking techniques like sautéing, braising, roasting and frying.

BK: How do you create a menu for a dinner party?

RK: I try to combine basic Indian dishes and dishes with Indian flavors made with ingredients not commonly found in India. I recently made an Indian spiced pork roast with pears and cardamom.

BK: What one piece of advice can you give to home cooks who want to explore Indian cooking?

RK: It's all in the spices. Know your spices and how to balance out the unique flavor of each spice.

Rather than a recipe this month, I urge readers to purchase Ruta's book. With very little effort you will be creating authentic and delicious Indian dishes.

RCPC Appoints New Boardmember

Environmental attorney Stuart M. Flashman was appointed to fill a vacancy on the RCPC board of directors at the June 7 board meeting. A Rockridge resident since 1992, he's currently a solo land use law practitioner.

Stu co-chairs the legal team for the Fourth Bore Coalition, protecting Rockridge from the impacts of that enormous Caltrans project. He also is the attorney for the petitioners on the Oak to Ninth project. A past member of the Sierra Club executive committee, he currently serves on the Bay Chapter legal committee.

Stu is a past planning commissioner (1989-1990) and city council member (1985) for the City of Emeryville, and was an elected East Bay MUD director for this area from 1990-1994 (President, 1994). He currently serves on EBMUD's water supply management plan 2040 Community Liaison Committee. He founded the Emeryville Shoreline Committee and served as its co-chairman from 1985 to 1990. He was on the board of directors of Citizens for the Eastshore State Park from 1986 to 1992, and served on the board of trustees of the Alameda County Mosquito Abatement District from 1985 to the present.

Caldecott Tunnel 4th Bore Update

The RCPC subcommittee on the 4th Bore of the Caldecott Tunnel project is preparing its response to the project's Draft Environmental Assessment/Environmental Impact Report (EA/EIR). The RCPC board of directors appointed board member Ellen Peterson as its representative to the Fourth Bore Coalition (FBC), an association of neighborhood groups created in response to the potential project impacts. The FBC will compile a list of mitigations over the summer, prior to the anticipated release by CalTrans of the final EA/EIR in October.

The EA/EIR is available at the project's CalTrans website: http://www.dot.ca.gov/dist4/caldecott/draft\_ea\_eir.htm. An overview of the project and alternatives as identified by CalTrans are also available on the site.

Saint Augustine Church Celebrates 100 Years in Rockridge

by Jackie Frost

Saint Augustine Church will celebrate its centennial this fall with a full roster of events to commemorate its 100 years in Rockridge.

Father Mark Wiesner, pastor of the diverse 400-member parish, will officiate at a special Centennial Mass Sunday September 9 at 10:30 a.m., marking 100 years to the day of the founding of the Alcatraz Avenue parish. Bishops Allen Vigneron and John Cummins of the Diocese of Oakland will also join in the celebration.

The first Mass celebrated in the parish was held at midnight on Christmas Eve, 1907, and Bishop Cummins returns to his home parish of St. Augustine this coming Christmas Eve to preside and preach for this special centennial liturgy.

"Of course, we need a good party," Father Wiesner said, so the parish is planning a Centennial Dinner Dance on Saturday evening, January 26, 2008, at the Elks Lodge in Alameda with a catered dinner and dancing to a live band. Tickets will go on sale in the fall.

As one of the oldest Catholic Churches in Oakland, St. Augustine's long, rich history reflects the ebbs and flows of the neighborhood itself.

During the boom years of the 1950s, more than 1,500 families crowded into the 550-seat Tudor style church and 350 students attended St. Augustine School. To accommodate the growing congregation, the old church was torn down and replaced in 1959 with the current, larger building on Alcatraz Avenue. The gym and cafeteria were also added during this time. The Sisters of the Holy Names were in residence in their convent on Regent Street.

Only the pipe organ was retained from the original church and members of the parish are now hoping to have it restored.

During the 1970s, church membership declined. Split by the new BART line and freeway, many Rockridge residents left for the suburbs. The Holy Spirit Parish in Berkeley opened and took with it families who lived north of Ashby Avenue. In 1975, the convent closed and the Sisters of the Holy Names moved to their Harbord Drive location in Oakland. By the mid-1990s, fewer than 200 families attended mass regularly.

In 2004, the Diocese of Oakland closed St. Augustine School.

Today, the parish is in the midst of a renewal. Membership has more than doubled since Father Wiesner became pastor in January 2004, and two new schools have taken up residence in the school building: The Pacific Boys Choir and the Escuela Bilingue Internacional. The old convent now houses Elizabeth House, a transitional home for women and their children.

Parish members serve in a broad range of ministries, including the St. Vincent de Paul Society, a mentorship program at Peralta Elementary School in its early stages, Oakland Community Organizations (OCO), Amnesty International and Youth Uprising, and prison and hospital ministries.

The 48-year-old building is also in line for improvements. The parish will retrofit the front façade of the church as well as the rectory, construct a wheelchair access to the church's meeting hall, reconfigure the parking lot, create gardens and green space, and restore the bell tower with digital chimes.

Impressive Community Showing at City's Zoning Meeting

Zoning changes proposed for the Temescal district could drastically change Telegraph and lower Claremont avenues. Recognizing both the proposal's complexity and divided neighborhood viewpoints, the city's Zoning Update Committee delayed its recommendations and scheduled a meeting for August 15 to provide additional time for unheard neighborhood input.

Commissioner Doug Boxer expressed interest in meeting with community groups and walking through the neighborhood to better understand the issues prior to the next hearing.

The City Planning Department's proposal contains several elements including updating Oakland's C-28 zoning code; four special SD-TEM (Special District-Temescal Corridor Combining Zone) zones specific to this area, each including height and a development density bonus; a new design review procedure; and several General Plan amendments. The proposed changes affect properties along Telegraph Avenue from the Berkeley border to 41st Street, along Shattuck from Highway 24 to 46th Street, along Claremont Avenue between Telegraph Avenue and Cavour Street, and in two Temescal residential neighborhoods. Claremont Avenue's classification northeast to Cavour would change from "Mixed Housing Type Residential" to "Community Commercial" with C-30 zoning replacing the current C-28 zoning for this area only.

The plan includes protecting the historic "neighborhood-defining" commercial section on Telegraph and Shattuck avenues. A height limit of 35 feet is proposed for that section only. For all other areas, the building height increases to 45 feet, with 55 feet conditionally permitted. A proposed 30 percent density bonus would be granted when a developer provides one "community benefit," such as underground parking, affordable housing, or contributing to a neighborhood park.

Differing opinions on Temescal's future were evident at the hearing.

Standing Together for Accountable Neighborhood Development (STAND), representing over 1,000 residents through petition signatures, supports a 35-foot limit with 45 feet conditionally permitted in all overlay zones, preventing impacts from more intense development. STAND members worked hard for a conditionally-permitted increase to four stories (or 45 feet) on Telegraph with neighborhood-serving ground-floor commercial space. In contrast, other speakers proposed a 55-foot minimum height.

The RCPC board envisions a future Claremont Avenue/Telegraph Avenue Rockridge "Gateway" developing into a human-scale, mixed-use area with individual, diverse storefronts of an appropriate commercial unit size and density. Extending the General Plan "Neighborhood Center Mixed Use" designation from Telegraph Avenue along Claremont Avenue and retaining its C-28 zone best accomplishes this goal.

The complete proposal can be found either at www.oaklandnet.com/government/ceda/revised/planningzoning/Commission/ and viewing the June 20 agenda, or at www.rockridge.org under the PPRC Committee.

Oakland Bicycle Master Plan Update

by Gloria Bruce, RCPC Secretary

At the June RCPC Town Hall meeting, Jason Patton, manager of the Oakland Bicycle Master Plan, provided an overview of a long-term update of the city's 1999 bicycle plan which aims to make Oakland more bicycle-friendly. The city currently has three types of bikeways: paths completely separate from cars (such as the path at MLK Regional Shoreline); bicycle lanes (such as those along Broadway Auto Row); and bicycle routes (like the popular Webster-Shafter route from Rockridge to uptown Oakland). The new master plan proposes two new types of bicycle access: bicycle boulevards modeled somewhat after Berkeley's network, and arterial bike routes (busier roads with outer lanes that can accompany bicycles). Proposed improvements include enhanced signage and traffic calming to create a route from Temescal to Emeryville via Cavour, Vicente, and 55th Streets.

Of interest to many RCPC residents was a proposed reconfiguration of upper Broadway between Keith and College avenues. Patton described changing the current four-lane road into a thoroughfare with one travel lane in each direction, a center left-turn lane, and bike lanes alongside street parking. He stressed that this proposal was in its early stages and more traffic impact studies would follow. While one resident found the proposal "counterintuitive," others praised the idea, including a Lawton Avenue resident who said he and his neighbors are hoping for a safer, quieter Broadway. Patton assured listeners the reconfiguration would not cut auto carrying capacity in half, but it would slow down cars. The evolution of the plan will depend on how the city, public works and neighbors balance the benefits of swift car travel with pedestrian safety and bicycle access, he said.

The meeting closed with pleas for better bike parking for everyone from Oakland Tech students to elder residents who feel insecure locking their bikes outside. Patton urged residents to stay involved, check www.oaklandpw.com for the draft Master Plan's progress, and use the many bicycle routes already existing in Oakland.

The RCPC will continue to inform neighbors about these projects and to hold frequent town meetings with opportunities to comment on neighborhood issues.

Chabot Plan

asthma. The school buildings have shown reduced operating and maintenance costs. OUSD has also undertaken a district-wide energy and water conservation strategy that is expected to reduce utility costs by between $750,000 and $1,000,000 annually. Chabot Elementary will be the first school to be constructed or retrofitted under OUSD's new environmental guidelines.

At an open community meeting attended by teachers, parents and neighbors on June 11, the design team took input on the initial schematic design. They presented the final schematic design at another community meeting on June 28.

The final design phase will occur in late summer. If all goes according to the ambitious project schedule, the construction team will break ground in June 2008.

All are invited to the next community meeting Tuesday, September 25, 7-9 p.m., at the Chabot School Auditorium, 6686 Chabot Road.

Lights, Camera... Rockridge?

by Jeff Small

On Monday, May 7, many a Rockridge resident awoke to find our sleepy hamlet had been bitten by the Hollywood bug. Saatchi & Saatchi Advertising had chosen Rockridge as the backdrop to film a new Toyota commercial to be aired this summer. College Avenue was blocked from 6 to 9 a.m. from the BART Station at Keith all the way to Kales.

Shiny new Toyota Camrys and Highlanders could be seen being filmed as they turned from the side streets onto College Avenue. Peter Newfield from Ranch Exit Films, the company that executed the filming, was happy to be filming in Rockridge. He humorously commented: "The Rockridge neighborhood was very generous to accommodate our intrusion and unrealistic no-parking demands for the necessary post-apocalyptic look that Toyota insists upon."

It is customary for a community to receive a gift when a production company films in a residential area. On behalf of the Rockridge community, the RCPC thanks Peter Newfield and crew for the donation of $500 to Peralta School to aid in their post-fire rebuilding efforts.

Peralta School Celebrates Bike to School Day with Parade and Posters

by Melanie Grubman, education director, Safe Routes to Schools

On Thursday, May 17, National Bike to Work Day, 50 parents and kids showed up at 7:45 am— no minor feat for parents of school-aged kids—at Peralta Elementary School on 63rd Street with bikes, trailers, flags, helmets and smiles. With motivational cheers like, "Peralta students bike to school," kindergarteners to 5th graders pedaled and rolled their way three wobbly miles to the school's temporary location at Carter Middle School, 4521 Webster Street. Peralta School boasted over 65 students—one quarter of its total population—who rode to school on two wheels (not counting training wheels).

The event was a culmination of a year's worth of activities preparing families and youth for the Safe Routes to Schools program sponsored by Alameda County. Training spanned the spectrum from safety classes to poster contests, with the goal of creating safe neighborhoods and healthy kids by encouraging more foot and bike traffic to school. Due in part to the success and enthusiasm of the pilot program at Peralta School, Alameda County is now planning to expand the Safe Routes project to 30 more schools.

Shown below are the winners of the Bike to School Day poster contest, entitled "Rolling Around my Neighborhood on Human-Powered Wheels." The first-place winner was third-grader Chloe Kilebrew-Buehl; second place went to kindergartener Sam Knight.

All poster artists were entered into a free raffle for a new bike and helmet subsidized by Hank and Frank's Bicycles, which was won by Gabriel Stamperkurn. For more information on how to sign your school up for technical assistance provided by the Alameda County Safe Routes to Schools Program next year, contact melanie@transcoalition.org

I was just in this great little store I was in there for hours. They had erasers from Japan in the shape of penguins and frogs

Sudoku books I got Mr Chefman a cool Cookbook and two tea towels whoa I am so addicted

Really friendly folks and gifts galore sort of an old fashioned variety toy store mixed with design-ery grown up gifts.
