Help Set RCPC's 2005 Agenda

RCPC Board seeks community input for 2005 planning.

by Jessica Pitt, RCPC Vice-Chair

We need your input! In late January, the RCPC Board will hold its annual strategic planning retreat. At this day-long planning session, the board will set program priorities for the coming year, review the budget, and allocate funding for the 2005 fiscal year. We want to make sure that Rockridge residents weigh in and help set the direction for RCPC.

Please join us at the January 20 General Meeting to share your ideas about where RCPC should focus its attention and resources in 2005. If you have ideas about what RCPC should be doing to improve the Share your ideas about transportation, traffic, crime, parking, improvements under BART, commercial development, high density housing, sustainable community.

Coming This Fall: Rockridge Kitchen Tour

Calling all kitchens and friends of kitchens

by Jennifer Edmister

It's that time again! The Rockridge Community Planning Council seeks renovated or classic kitchens to consider for the 2005 Rockridge Kitchen Tour, coming in October. Past tours have featured a variety of exquisite Rockridge kitchens, from bungalow style to country, from traditional to contemporary. If you or someone you know is putting the finishing touches on a kitchen remodel, or is already enjoying a fantastic new kitchen, please let us know! Submissions and questions may be directed to Jennifer Edmister at toejrb@earthlink.net or to RCPC at 644-4228, attention Kitchen Tour.

1,000 Free Trees For Oakland

Only 999 to go

When City Councilmember Jane Brunner first moved into Rockridge, the trees on her street were mere saplings planted by neighborhood activists and the area looked promising but bare. Three decades later, those saplings have grown into the wonders that give North Oakland its distinctive quality

Rockridge News Editor Wins Bid to be Peralta Trustee

Rockridge News Editor Cy Gulassa won a decisive victory over opponent Melanie Sweeny-Griffith for trustee of the Peralta Community College District in Area 6, receiving over 72 percent of the 40,000 votes cast November 2 in Montclair, Rockridge and North Berkeley. He will be sworn in along with three other trustees at a December 14 ceremony in the Peralta Colleges District Office, 333 East 8th Street, Oakland at 7 p.m.

Gulassa says he won because voters are disgusted with the long history of "questionable decisions and deal-making" by the current board. "The same board that voted itself trips to China and Africa to recruit foreign students and to outsource work to a company that had ties with the previous chancellor, just voted in a lame duck session in November to enter into a contract to sell off Laney lands to a developer—two weeks before the four new board-member majority is scheduled to be sworn in," he said in an interview. "This is exactly the kind of collusive behavior that has to end."

Vowing to provide accountability to the people who pay the $100 million in taxes annually to the District, Gulassa is calling for a comprehensive audit, strategic planning, financial transparency, and a new system of decision making that includes members of the community, students, faculty and staff. "Unlike the boards of private companies, community college trustees are accountable to the citizens who actually own the colleges. I intend to fulfill my responsibility to the community that so overwhelmingly supported me."

In My Opinion

Was It Worth It? A Summing Up by Two Rockridge Volunteers for John Kerry

SUSAN MONTAUK: Now that the pundits, analysts and policy wonks have had their say about what went wrong for the Democrats, it's time for us left-coast liberals to put aside our disappointment and reflect upon the positive outcomes. "Positive outcomes; can there be any?" you ask. Well yes, actually.

Susan Montauk

Speaking as a first-time national election volunteer, I can honestly say that, regardless of the outcome, the experience of actively supporting a candidate was an empowering and gratifying one. And for the volunteers I met along the way, it was a unique energizing adventure. Friends, neighbors, strangers, we were all united in our concerns and we put our words into action. That solidarity of purpose made a lasting impression on all our lives.

My story is like that of many others: over a period of many months, I invested my hopes, money, time and energy to the campaign. In July I hosted a fund-raiser for my candidate. Throughout the summer and early fall, I worked with a local grassroots group to register new voters (350 of them at the UC Berkeley campus alone), phone-bank to swing states, and canvass door-to-door in Reno, Nevada. And, the remarkable thing about it was that there were millions of volunteers doing the same all over this nation.

Quite a few friends have very kindly thanked me for my efforts in this campaign. I am somewhat embarrassed by their gestures — first, because my efforts paled in comparison to those of so many others; and second, because I derived such a rich sense of fulfillment from the experience that I feel I should be the one to extend thanks.

The spirit is still alive. One volunteer group that will be reorganizing to capture that spirit can be accessed online at www.eastbay4kerry.com.

LISA GIBSON: During the summer, my husband Gary and I hosted two John Kerry fundraisers that netted $6,000 and sponsored two Sunday afternoon phone banks that placed over 2,500 calls to Ohio voters. We thought only a few political junkie friends would join our first debate party, but over 50 guests arrived, thanks to our notice on the Kerry website. That night those strangers became part of a growing community of friends united by a desire for change in Washington; we co-hosted parties for the remaining debates and felt like family.

Lisa Gibson

During the final four days of the election, Gary and I volunteered with MoveOn.org to get out the vote in northeastern Pennsylvania where I grew up. Though I had no political organizing experience, I was designated precinct leader in the overwhelmingly Republican town of Clarks Summit. I was in charge of coordinating volunteers, knocking on doors, soliciting volunteers and making

Neighbors Call for Improved Safety at Dangerous Broadway/Lawton Intersection

by Abby Pollak, Chair; Rockridge Boulevard Neighborhood Association

The Rockridge Boulevard Neighborhood Association (RBNA), representing 55 households on South and North Rockridge Boulevard and Rockridge Place, has been working vigorously to improve signage and effective lighting at the Lawton/Broadway/Rockridge Boulevard crosswalk. On election day, the group set up a petition table at the crosswalk and, by the time the polls closed, more than 350 neighbors had signed a petition calling for crosswalk safety improvements.

The almost-invisible crosswalk strikes a certain amount of terror into pedestrians who use it: parents with strollers and dogs, children going to school, adults walking to the BART station or to College Avenue for shopping. Countless people have complained that even when they're in the crosswalk, drivers don't stop.

Drivers, too, find themselves in perilous positions as they turn onto Broadway from Rockridge Boulevard or Lawton Avenue. There's so much jockeying and angling for who gets to turn first that drivers often neglect to check the crosswalk for hapless pedestrians.

Because of the dramatic increase in traffic, the danger of a car crash or pedestrian injury has risen sharply. Despite a posted speed limit of 35 mph, cars have been clocked travelling at 40 to 55 mph. There have been fender-benders, serious car accidents, car-bicycle collisions, and a few serious injuries, including one earlier this year when a pregnant woman crossing at night was hit by a car. The distraught driver kept saying, "I didn't see her! I didn't even see the crosswalk!"

Neighbors are grateful to the City for recently changing the bulb in the street light on the east side of the crosswalk, but still feel far from safe. The RBNA will be asking the City for: four "Slow Crosswalk" and "Slow School" signs in reflective chartreuse; a mid-crosswalk "State Law" sign displaying the speed limit and a warning to stop for pedestrians; wide new reflective stripes in the existing crosswalk; and small reflective lights sunk into the roadway along the parallel crosswalk lines. These low-cost lights, solar powered and electronically activated, are similar to those already installed at Broadway and 28th and Claremont Avenue above College.

While acknowledging Oakland's difficult financial situation, RBNA feels these improvements are a relatively cheap solution to a high-cost peril.

Representatives of the group hope to meet with Jane Brunner to present supporting documentation and the petition with 350 signatures in the near future.

RBNA thanks everyone who stopped by and signed the petition, and everyone who worked on the campaign and will keep neighbors informed on this safety initiative. For more information: tabbies@earthlink.net.

Oakland Fund for Children and Youth Boosts Local After-School Programs

by Patrick Daughton, Chair; OFCY Planning and Oversight Committee

Launched in September, the $3.4 million Afterschool Initiative of the Oakland Fund for Children and Youth (OFCY) is providing Emerson Elementary School, Claremont Middle School, and Carter Middle School, among others, with an array of innovative after-school programs.

The Initiative grew out of community concern for the scarcity of programs that keep students on campus and off streets after school hours. After months of discussions and neighborhood meetings, a plan was crafted, and late in 2003 the Planning and Oversight Committee, a City of Oakland commission charged with governance of the fund, issued a call for proposals.

Successful respondents then created partnerships with local schools. A collaboration led by AmeriCorps' Bay Area Community Resources, including the Museum of Children's Art (MOCHA) and the arts education non-profit Opera Piccola (Italian for "small works"), was awarded $213,000 to serve students at Emerson and Martin Luther King, Jr., Elementary School. Teachers and partnership staffmembers will provide after-school academic assistance, enrichment programs and supervised recreational opportunities.

After-school activities for Claremont's 300 students include a daily program of tutoring and homework assistance, mentored laboratories, drop-in recreation and club activities, and a variety of enrichment classes focused on youth empowerment and community service. Titled the Student and Family Education and Enrichment Collaborative, the partnership, which was awarded $100,000, includes staff from the popular Destiny Arts Center and the East Bay Conservation Corps.

At Carter Middle School, Opera Piccola, in cooperation with AmeriCorps, will offer drama, dance, music, art and photography through its PRIDE collaborative. Resident artists plan to use the $100,000 grant to take 11-14-year-old students on four field trips over the school year as well as offer monthly family workshops and a Family Art Night.

Funding for all programs under the Afterschool Initiative is renewable through June 2006. However, as Carter Middle School has once again been placed on an Oakland Unified School District list of campuses slated for probable closure in 2005, the future of this partnership is uncertain.

These programs, as with 20 other programs funded throughout the City by the Initiative, are free to enrollees and operate every school day at the school site for a minimum of three hours after the end of classes. In each case, fund dollars have been leveraged to great effect by local support and the federal 21st Century Community

After-school activities for Claremont's 300 students include a program of tutoring and homework assistance, mentored laboratories, drop-in recreation and club activities, and enrichment classes.

Learning Centers Program.

Funding for OFCY consists of 2.5% of the unrestricted portion of the city budget. As required by the Kids First! Initiative, Measure K, passed in 1996, expenditures are limited to direct services to children.

OFCY funds include $50,000 for the TryUMF program at Oakland Technical High School; $75,000 for the ArtGate arts and literacy program at Carter; and $45,000 for a comprehensive after-school program for 50 children at the North Oakland Community School.

Each year the Planning and Oversight Committee solicits proposals for competitive grants. Approximately $5.5 million will be available for the 2005-06 funding cycle to qualified, non-profit service providers or public agencies serving Oakland children or youth. RFP forms and granting criteria may be downloaded at www.ofcy.org. Information is also available at 238-6379. Applications are due January 6, 2005.

FORL Grants Fund Rockridge Library Grounds Improvement and Research Materials

by John Gussman,
Friends of the Rockridge Library

The Friends of the Rockridge Library (FORL) is ending 2004 with two significant grants to the Rockridge Branch Library. The first will provide for new landscaping around the building except for the front façade, where the wisteria — loved by many — will remain. The north side of the building will be enhanced by a planting of non-invasive timber bamboo, which will accentuate the soaring “cathedral” windows.

The second grant will allow the library to acquire a major reference work, the recently enlarged and updated Dictionary of National Biography, or DNB. The new DNB is, within its scope, the definitive biographical encyclopedia, with nearly 55,000 articles (spread across 60 volumes) covering the lives of people who played important parts in the history and culture of the British Isles, the United States and Canada. The new edition is the fruition of 12 years of labor by Oxford University Press. It has been hailed as “one of the great publishing achievements of this century” (Atlantic Monthly), a “roll call of the great and the good, the eccentric and the bad” (Reuters), and “a work which makes superlatives superfluous” (New York Times).

Pat Lichter, the Rockridge Library’s Branch Manager, notes that biographical research is a popular and constant pursuit in the library. She expects that students and researchers will make good use of this resource for many years.

Library users should look for the DNB to appear in the library early in 2005. Also, they will have access to the online edition of the DNB from their home computers, starting in mid-December. For more information, call the Rockridge Library at 597-5017.

FORL has donated other important reference sets to the Rockridge Library in recent years, including the 20-volume Oxford English Dictionary (Second Edition) and two sets of the popular NOLO Press legal self-help books (including one set of volumes available for check-out).

FORL gratefully accepts donations from Rockridge neighbors and other interested persons. Those wishing to donate should send donation checks payable to “Friends of the Rockridge Library” to: FORL, 5245 College Avenue, #311, Oakland, CA 94618.

Hip Hop Thrives in Rockridge Dance Studio

by Jodi Schiller

Corey Action, one of the hottest hip-hop dancers and choreographers in the Bay Area, brings his gifted teaching to New Style Motherlode, 5451 College Avenue. Corey and partner Teela Shine Ross opened the New Style studio in 2000, after teaching at the Alice Arts Center for many years.

New Style Motherlode offers 23 classes for aspiring dancers of all ages and skills, including Hip Hop, belly dancing, jazz, and praise dance (a form of ecstatic worship dance originating in African-American churches). Carolee Kaplan, who has been taking Hip Hop classes for three years, says, “Not only is Corey an amazing dancer, he also has a big spirit that communicates to everyone in the class and makes them feel high, welcomed and included.” Janice Litva, whose son Lee also attends, says, “Lee has become more self-confident and independent since starting New Style. Here everyone is a winner.”

New Style is not just a classroom. It also hosts the hottest hip-hop dance troupe in the Bay Area—New Style Motherlode. The troupe recently performed at the annual

All Dressed Up

Last month I shared my new found love for salads. I mentioned that the newer gourmet greens used in au courant salads need very little dressing because the greens are themselves quite flavorful. That said, there is nothing like a good dressing to enhance the perfect salad.

Think of a dressing as a sauce for a salad. Just as a sauce should complement rather than mask the flavor of the principal food, the dressing for a salad should complement the main ingredient. The main salad ingredient could be the greens, a fruit (apples or figs), a cheese (goat or blue) or even a fish (crab or smoked trout.). If you order a smoked trout salad at a restaurant, you want to taste the fish. Ingredients should be lightly coated and never swim in dressing. A good rule is that with salad dressing, less is more.

Although a great many ingredients can be used to make a salad dressing, most are based on either a mixture of oil and vinegar, called vinaigrette, or a mayonnaise or other egg emulsification. The simple vinaigrette, or French dressing, is an emulsion of oil and vinegar seasoned with salt and pepper. The standard ratio is three parts oil to one part vinegar or other citrus juice such as lemon.

Many types of oil can be used to make a salad dressing, like canola, walnut or safflower. However, the best vinaigrette is made with extra virgin olive oil. Olive oil is the only oil extracted from a fruit rather than a seed, nut or grain. Like wine, olive oils vary greatly in quality. The label designations — virgin, extra virgin and pure — refer to the acidity of the oil and the process used to extract the oil. I tend to use high quality extra virgin olive oil for salads and the less expensive pure olive oil for cooking.

Different types of vinegar can be used to make salad dressing. Red wine and balsamic vinegar are most common. Depending on the main salad ingredient, I may use rice wine, cider, white wine, champagne, or raspberry vinegar. I usually don't use flavored vinegars such as herb and garlic as their flavors tend to overpower the dressing. Citric juices such as lemon, lime or orange can be substituted for all or part of the vinegar in salad dressing.

Herbs, spices, shallots, Dijon mustard and sugar are a few of the many flavoring ingredients used to enhance a vinaigrette dressing. Shallots, herbs and garlic should be finely chopped before being added to the dressing. Salt and pepper should always be added to enhance the flavors.

When preparing a vinaigrette dressing, first combine the vinegar, seasonings, and other flavorings in bowl. Vigorously whisk in the oil, pouring it in a slow steady stream. As you toss the salad, add the dressing in small amounts until the greens have a light sheen.

For an all purpose vinaigrette dressing, I recommend Jacques Pepin's basic recipe.

Jacques' Simple Vinaigrette

- 2 teaspoons chopped garlic
- 1 shallot, chopped
- 2 tablespoons Dijon mustard
- ½ teaspoon ground black pepper
- ¼ cup balsamic or red wine vinegar
- 1 cup extra virgin olive oil

Put all the ingredients in a jar, screw on the lid, and shake well. Taste and adjust the seasoning, adding more oil or vinegar as needed. For a Caesar dressing, add 1 chopped anchovy and a raw egg.

Rockridge health care specialists literally bent over backwards to explain to an attentive audience how to get their aching backs back in shape at a recent forum sponsored by the Rockridge District Association (RDA) and moderated by Sara Wilson, Market Hall manager. The advice ranged from highly technical discussions of the origins and treatment of back pain to muscle balance and the basic principles of yoga, all delivered to a rapt, lunch-hour group eager for information.

A simple way to prevent a common cause of back pain, according to the experts, is to remember the basic advice freely bestowed by parents and drill sergeants: sit up straight, stand tall and do a lot of walking. Slouching in chairs, standing with curved back or belly out, leaning forward as you walk as if you were still on your touring bike or lugging a backpack or baby sling, and doing repetitive work or exercise involving only certain groups of muscles are sure ways to earn chronic pain and a trip to a therapist.

The first order of business with a new patient, says Chiropractor Fred Githler, is to watch him or her move around the office and elicit a family history and life style. "My first job is to learn the causes, then relieve the pain and effect a permanent cure," he says. That can be as simple as an exercise routine, a different mattress, a change of diet, a yoga class or a consultation with a doctor or other health specialist.

A visit to the office of physical therapist Steve Ryan, who teaches clinical anatomy at UCSF and dance kinesiology at Mills College, also begins with a patient's history and includes a "neuromusculoskeletal" examination that covers a physical, hands-on examination of nerves, muscle balance and joint mobility. His multifaceted approach to treating low back pain calls for improving the patient's muscle flexibility, strength, coordination and posture. A major problem, he says, is that often the inner layers of abdominal muscles, which keep the spine aligned and reduce wear, grow weak with age and need to be toned. Weightlifter abs and sit ups alone won't fix the problem. A good exercise for strengthening these critical muscles is to repeatedly pull in the belly button while other muscles are relaxed. But in the end, Steve says, strength and coordination mean nothing without a conscious effort to move properly. His strategy includes teaching patients how to take care of themselves.

The causes of back pain can be very complex and should be taken seriously, according to Dr. Frances Dalton. Aside from muscular origins and viral infections and that stab of pain when you sneeze or reach for a book, back pain may be caused by skeletal problems like arthritis, osteoporosis or even breast cancer, or a herniated disc or pinched nerve. Symptoms of a pinched nerve, as opposed to a muscle spasm, include numbness and tingling that radiates to extremities, she says. She advises a thorough diagnosis and says it's a fallacy to think that medication is bad because it merely "masks" the pain. While not a cure, medication can prevent the condition from becoming hard-wired into the nervous system, which intensifies the symptoms and complicates recovery. If problems persist, X-ray may be necessary and if extremities are involved, an MRI is best. The last resort is invasive surgery. The bottom line, she says, is "Always listen to your body."

There are a lot of different types of yoga but for back pain, therapeutic yoga is best, says Julie Rappaport, who teaches yoga at Namaste on College Avenue. The core secret is to learn to breathe properly (raise arms and inhale through the mouth, then lower arms and exhale through the nose, and focus eyes inward to become aware of the inner body and spinal movement). But remember, she warns, that hormonal and emotional changes affect mobility. "The best approach to yoga is to shop for a class that's perfect for you and inform the instructor of any problems."

In addition to yoga, Julie believes that the two best exercises for keeping healthy forever are walking and swimming. Julie recently published a book entitled 365 Yoga.

Make a Joyful Noise

What would the month of December be without music and celebration to brighten our spirits in this darkest month of the year? For many weeks, many of your neighbors have been busy practicing to bring you outstanding concerts and dance performances. Here are some events you will not want to miss.

A Ceremony of Carols (Dec 4, 5 and 19)

This wonderful work by Benjamin Britten will be performed by the Berkeley Community Chorus at St. Joseph the Worker Church, 1640 Addison Street, Berkeley. The program will also feature Vivaldi's Gloria, Alleluia by Randall Thompson and the Agnus Dei by Samuel Barber. Call 510/964-0665.

Rachmaninoff All-Night Vigil (Sun, Dec 12, 4 p.m.)

Often hailed as Rachmaninoff's greatest work, this beautiful a cappella setting of the Russian Orthodox Vespers and Matins services was written by the composer in 1915 as a plea for peace in response to World War One. It will be performed by the renowned Bella Musica Chorus at St Mary Magdalen Catholic Church at 2005 Berryman Street, Berkeley.

Berkeley Ballet Theater Nutcracker (Dec. 10-19)

Come one and all to see this wonderful, fresh production of the Nutcracker playing at the Julia Morgan Theater. The ballet is directed by Sally Streets, winner of the 2003 Isadora Lifetime achievement award and Robert Nichols. It features members of the Berkeley Ballet Theater Youth Company and some wonderful guest artists. This is fun for all, young and old. Call 845-8542.

African-American Spirituals and Christmas Music (Sun, Dec. 12, 4 p.m.)

Join the Oakland Bay Area Community Chorus, under the direction of William "Bill" Bell (aka The Jazz Professor), for an afternoon of traditional Spirituals, gospel, hymns and Christmas music, including Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus." Our Lady of Lourdes Church, 2808 Lakeshore Avenue, Oakland. Tickets $20/$10, at the door or call 653-6783.

Oakland Interfaith Gospel Choir (Dec. 4)

You can bring the spirit of Christmas, of hope and joy, into your heart with the award-winning Oakland Interfaith Gospel Choir. They are giving their annual Christmas Concert at the Paramount Theater, 2025 Broadway, Oakland. Musical director is Terrence Kelly.

Christmas Eve Celebrations

It's not a time to be sitting home alone. Celebrations are planned all over— quiet, intimate, stately or grand. You might call St. Augustine's on Alcatraz or the College Avenue Presbyterian Church. In Berkeley, First Congregational Church on Durant traditionally presents a midnight worship service with a diverse program of music and liturgical dance. Or visit Grace Cathedral, St. Ignatius or Glide Memorial in San Francisco. Expect crowds, so be sure to go early to find parking and a good seat.

Other Favorites

The San Francisco Symphony features Peter and the Wolf (Dec. 11) and a wonderful Choral Christmas Spectacular (Dec 17-19) at Davies Hall. Call 415/864-6000.

We wish every one a very wonderful holiday season!

RCPC Agenda 2005

College Avenue business district, develop the UnderBART area, improve traffic and pedestrian safety, beautify the neighborhood, and support our local schools, parks and library, this is your opportunity to share them with the Board.

This year, the board will focus particular attention on how RCPC can shape future development along College Avenue. We will be discussing next steps in the land use planning process launched in 2004 and the types of development that RCPC would like to promote in our neighborhood. These are important discussions, and we need to hear from you.

If you are unable to attend the January 20 meeting, but have ideas and opinions that you would like to share with the Board, please contact Vice-Chair Jessica Pitt at 655-1210.

A Time to Reflect —

The Holiday Season is a time for family, friends and sensitivity to the change of seasons. It is common to take time out and reflect upon the year past. Material concerns (real estate being one major issue!) can sometimes overwhelm our perspective on what is essential in life. This special time of the year can assist us in rediscovering peace of mind and heart, expand our generosity, and deepen our appreciation for what we have. May we all take time this season to relax and find joy in the company of family, friends, and our greater community. — Jeff Auen

Don't Choose the Blues: Dial 1-800/309-2131

Crisis support line helps callers deal with emotional crisis

by Claire Wahrhaftig-Isaacs

It starts with silence. Next, a sense that someone is there, struggling to speak. Finally, softly blurred, "May I speak to someone? I think I have a problem. I think I want to kill myself."

So might a call begin. It's a regular occurrence at the Alameda County Crisis Support Services hot line. The agency's main mission is the caller who is contemplating taking his life, or may already have acted and seeks emergency help. However, the 80 to 90 staff and volunteers who answer such calls 24/7 are trained to listen, to respond, to support, to calm, to locate resources, and, when appropriate, to make direct suggestions to anyone in the population who is in crisis.

"Am I really going to hell?," these voices ask. "I'm damned. Please help me!"

Once known as Suicide Prevention of Alameda County, ACCSS now responds to a very broad range of crises. Some mentally ill patients ask for assurance that their hallucinations are not real; others beg for ways to overcome clinical depression. Some seek housing, counseling, shelter from abuse, respite from loneliness, or just a warm, reassuring voice. Recovering substance abusers check in to stay "on program." Family and friends of troubled persons call for advice.

"Hi. Umm, I'm not suicidal, umm, but, uh, could I talk to you? I'm really down, and I don't have anyone to call. Is that okay? I won't talk long."

During the "Holly Jolly Christmas" season, loneliness, depression and despair can surface. ACCSS provides a psychological gift.

At this time of year, aggravated by the "Holly Jolly Christmas" atmosphere in stores and malls, deep-seated feelings of despair, depression, isolation, frustration, loss and grief can surface more strongly. When a friend says she is "in the dumps" and doesn't know who to talk to, or a relative can't reach his counselor, or grief is tearing you apart, call the Hot Line. It may be just the way to get past a bad moment, or through a really hard day.

"I'm waiting for a ride to my 12-step program, and I'm really anxious." "My shrink is out of town and I've run out of my meds." "My old man's been beatin' up on me a lot lately; I can put up with it, but I've got three kids here." "I suspect someone is cheating my elderly neighbor out of her home."

The phone counselor is that one person who can listen without judging. He or she can often suggest resources unknown to the caller: shelters for the domestically abused and homeless; investigation of child or elder abuse reports; sliding-scale-fee counseling services for the psychologically distressed; patient stabilization for those in need of immediate psychological and medical attention.

Because suicide is the 11th leading cause of death in the U.S. (homicide is the 14th), Clinical Director Crissy Brewer asks everyone to pay attention if you note behavior or conditions like: prior or recent suicide attempts; suicide in the family, which may be genetic or a learned behavior; poor physical health with depression; giving away personal possessions and "cleaning up" one's life; a burst of energy and light-heartedness after a long period of depression; or stocking up on pills.

Most of all, do not ever take a person's discussion of suicide lightly, even if the conversational tone is joking. Drawing the person out is definitely better than pretending, thinking it will go away. And get help. If you don't know where to get it, call the ACCSS Hot Line.

ACCSS will also take your call if you are just feeling blue, down, or unable to cope for whatever reason. They are there to listen.

Next Month: Other ACCSS services: counseling mentally disabled seniors and grieving people; teens education outreach, volunteers.

EnJOYing the True Spirit of the Season

by Courtenay Redis

Believe it or not, you can experience the JOY of the Holiday Season, in marked contrast to the stress, stretched pockets and anxiety that often accompany this time of year.

Free and enjoyable food and company can be found right here in Rockridge throughout the month of December, at Elizabeth House, a transitional program for low-income women and kids at 6423 Colby Street at Alcatraz.

Start the month off right by making your way to the annual Elizabeth House Holiday Open House on Sunday, December 5, from 2-7 pm. Stop in for some warm cider, spiced egg-nog, treats from local bakeries and savory entrées from local restaurants. Enjoy the holiday decorations, including the giant Christmas tree donated annually by the North Oakland/Emeryville Rotary Club. Bring your friends and family, or come alone and make new friends.

Neighbors have also begun adopting some of the Elizabeth House families for gift-giving, and others, like school families at St. Theresa and Head Royce, are signing up to wrap gifts at Elizabeth House later in December. Donations of “gently used” items are accepted throughout the year and can be left in the donation bins by front door. If you complete a donation form, they will send you a receipt for your fully tax-deductible donation.

For more information about Elizabeth House, their Holiday Open House, adopting families for the holiday giving program or to volunteer as a gift-wraper, call 658-1380 or e-mail holidays@oakehouse.org.

My Opinion: Fundraisers

calls with the goal of identifying Kerry supporters and turning out the vote on Election Day.

By mid-day on the Big Day, I was leading a team of 10 people from New York and Maryland, and my cell phone kept ringing with more MoveOn.org volunteers asking, “What can I do to help?” I was moved to tears by the powerful sense of community and willingness of people to drive hundreds of miles to do their part. I got very little sleep, but was energized by the sense that I was a part of something much bigger than just a presidential election. This was a historic grassroots effort in what could be the most important election of our lifetime.

Being precinct leader was a monumental task, but it was a great success – even considering the disappointing outcome of the election. We turned out over 130 of our targeted Kerry supporters. I was elated that Pennsylvania ended up going for Kerry, but unfortunately it wasn’t enough to give Kerry the 270 electoral votes he needed.

I found myself crying a lot on the Wednesday after election day, watching Kerry’s gracious concession speech followed by Bush’s smug victory lap. I was overcome by a feeling of deep despair, but it was surprisingly short-lived. By Wednesday evening I was again filled with a great sense of accomplishment and connection to a whole new community of kindred spirits that I met through MoveOn.org.

Disappointed but not disheartened, in November we hosted yet another political party, which we called a “Post-Election Coming Together.” We hope to galvanize our collective strengths to move on and inspire our friends to build a deeper and more lasting foundation for the future. We must stay involved, forge alliances, and create a sustainable strategy for positive change.

Why wait for the new year to start a new you?

and make Rockridge an attractive place to live.

Determined to replicate the tree phenomenon started by community activists like Walter Miles in 1971 (see adjacent article), on November 9 Brunner launched a tree planting ceremony on Apgar Street in West Oakland, the first of 16 sites planned for that neighborhood and the beginning of a grand total of 1,000 trees she wants to plant over the coming year.

“Trees are good for the city in so many ways besides just their beauty,” she says. “Trees save energy. Trees are good for our health. Trees conserve water and reduce soil erosion. Trees increase property values. Trees slow traffic. Trees promote wildlife. And trees have social and educational value.” She hopes her project will spur the City into establishing an ongoing program of planting 2,000 trees per year.

Brunner says a free tree is available by simply calling 238-7001. Identify a location, promise to water the tree for a year, and City staff will cut a hole in the concrete and plant the tree.

Who Planted All the Street Trees in North Rockridge?

by Cy Gulassa

Legend says that Johnny Appleseed planted all the wild apple trees that bloom throughout the Midwest. But have you ever wondered who had the foresight to plant all of those lovely street trees in North Rockridge, the ones realtors say add thousands of dollars to the value of a home? According to Walter Miles, who lives at 445 61st Street, it all began in 1971 with the Telegraph Avenue Neighborhood Group (TANG). “We knew back then that trees not only add beauty, they help define a neighborhood and give it cohesion,” Miles said.

The group decided that every home in the association’s area — bounded by Highway 24 north to the Berkeley line and Telegraph Avenue east to College Avenue — should have at least one street tree. The project was organized by city block, each headed by a captain. A UC Berkeley arborist recommended a common tree for each block, and volunteers cut holes in the pavement; City crews then planted the trees. In all, 385 trees were planted, among them Chinese elm, ash and liquidambar. If they could afford it, homeowners paid for the trees; otherwise the association donated them. Homeowners were then responsible for keeping the trees watered during the early stages of growth.

This year, at the November 9 launching of Councilmember Jane Brunner’s project to plant 1,000 trees in Oakland over the coming year, Miles said the new trees will transform Oakland neighborhoods, including West Oakland, which until recently has been home to Oakland’s most notorious liquor store, a hotspot for trouble makers. “Trees help you think differently about where you live,” he said. “Instead of just houses, you suddenly see connections and a whole neighborhood.”

Drive under the overarching trees in Miles’ neighborhood and see for yourself the enduring gift the association gave Rockridge nearly 35 years ago.

Your December Matching Gift Helps Complete Frog Park!

by Theresa Nelson, RCPC Board Member and Parks Committee Liaison

The Rockridge Community Planning Council recently announced a special, end-of-year $2,500 matching grant for Phase Two of Frog Park. All gifts made before December 31, 2004, will be matched, dollar-for-dollar, up to $2,500.

More than $15,000 has been raised so far toward the goal of $25,000 for Phase Two. These funds will support native plantings along the Clifton-Cavour pathway, the expanded Plaza at Hardy, and additional play equipment at Hardy, among other items.

Your support is more important than ever. Recently, Frog Park learned that the old irrigation system we hoped to use along Clifton-Cavour will have to be completely replaced, rather than repaired. This costs a lot more than the amount of the repair which was in the budget, and it means that the native plantings and some items would have to be cut from Phase Two.

If we can reach — or even exceed — our fundraising goal of $25,000, we can support the native planting and help ensure completion of the park. Groundbreaking for Phase Two takes place after the first of the year. We need to reach our goal by the end of December so that the plans for the planting can be completed and approved in time for construction. Raising at least $2,500 from the community will bring an additional $2,500 in matching funds, which will help us reach the goal.

A special donor recognition and community information kiosk has been designed and will be built as part of Phase Two. All new gifts of $250 or more will be acknowledged on the main park plaque, along with all gifts of $250 or more from Phase One. You may choose to fund a specific item on the list, or contribute toward a larger item.

Please consider a special, year-end gift to Frog Park. All gifts are fully-tax-deductible. This is your chance to be a part of neighborhood history by making a financial contribution to Frog Park. Just use the special flyer enclosed in this issue of The Rockridge News. Select an opportunity which fits your interests, and enclose your check or credit card information with the form today, or contribute via the website at www.frogpark.org. You can help make the match and reach the goal. Frog Park will be completed soon!
