NCPC to Host Ceremony for Officers Who Nabbed Two Robbery Suspects

NCPC Meets Thursday, September 12, Rockridge Library. Ceremony: 6 p.m.

by Karen Ivy, NCPC Secretary

With eight robberies taking place in Rockridge in less than a three-week period, it was especially good news to hear that the Oakland Police Department (OPD) captured a pair of robbery suspects on August 26.

OPD Officers Gunther Lee and Dana Ly, on directed patrol on College Avenue

as a result of recent street robberies, spotted a vehicle at College and Keith that had reportedly been involved in a robbery on Howe Street. The suspects were taken into custody and a firearm was recovered.

Captain Anthony Toribio, in charge of the newly designated Area 2 which covers North Oakland and the Oakland Hills, will present the two arresting officers with commendations at a special public ceremony at 6 p.m. Thursday,

It Is Time to Move Rockridge's Overhead Electric Utility Lines Underground

by David Lorie

While Rockridge may lead the city of Oakland in charm and character, it lags behind many of Oakland's neighborhoods in replacing overhead utility lines.

Neighborhoods such as Crocker Highlands, Trestle Glen and Piedmont Pines have worked to get their utility lines moved underground, but Rockridge neighborhoods continue to tolerate and coexist with the maze of power, phone and cable lines strung precariously from rooftop to poletop.

It's time Rockridge caught up with its neighbors.

A group of interested residents has formed a committee to investigate the viability of "undergrounding" the overhead utility lines in Rockridge. You can learn more about it, take a survey to register your opinion, and get involved at www.rockridgeunderground.com.

The Pros and Cons of Undergrounding Utility Wires

Undergrounding power lines has several advantages: Aesthetics, increased property values, reduced outages during storms and safety (reduced risk of fire, seismic hazards and falling objects). It can also save neighborhood trees from severe and sometimes aggressively asymmetrical pruning.

Updating the street lighting during an undergrounding project can further enhance the aesthetics of the neighborhood and provide for increased safety from crime because of a more efficiently lit environment.

The main drawbacks are cost and disruption. The process of undergrounding existing overhead lines involves trenching the street and a portion of most properties (from the house to the street).

Construction takes about one year for each mile of undergrounding and costs roughly $60,000 per property plus approximately $9,000 in costs such as panel conversion and service lateral trenches associated with each property.

The California Public Utilities Commission (CPUC) has two programs for the replacement of existing overhead distribution lines with underground service. Under a Rule 20A project, the county, PG&E and other affected utilities pick up 85 percent of the total cost while property owners pay only for the cost associated with each property. But since PG&E is only undergrounding 30 miles of overhead power lines per year in its entire service area, the waitlist in Oakland is 40 years.

Piedmont Pines, for example, applied for a Rule 20A undergrounding in 1987. After years of battles with PG&E and the Oakland City Council, and after getting leapfrogged by other neighborhoods on the waitlist several times, construction finally got under way in October 2011. "We're really excited," said Robbie Neely of the Piedmont Pines Neighborhood Association. "Although it took forever to get started, Phase 1 will be completed by the end of the year." Ms. Neely added that when all three phases of the project are completed, it will be the largest residential undergrounding in the state.

For those neighborhoods seeking to speed up the process, there is a privately financed alternative that can have the utility lines undergrounded in a two-to-four year time frame. Under a Rule 20B project, the property

Rockridge Area Safeway Projects Still Problematic

Rockridge Shopping Center Final EIR for Rockridge Shopping Center Rebuild to be Issued Soon

by Stuart Flashman, RCPC Land Use Committee chair

Safeway's second Rockridge-area project, rebuilding the Rockridge Shopping Center to add 120,000 sq. ft. of additional retail and office space and replace the existing 50,000 sq. ft. store with one 15,000 sq. ft. larger, appears heading for a Planning Commission hearing in late September. The final environmental impact report (FEIR), which will include responses to comments on the draft report, is, according to Oakland Planner Darin Ranelletti, due to be published "early in September."

The project at Broadway and Pleasant Valley Avenue between the Rockridge, Temescal, and Piedmont Avenue communities has a long history, including two major revisions to respond to criticism from the community and from the Planning Commission. Most observers feel the revisions have significantly improved the project, but serious concerns remain about traffic impacts on surrounding residential streets.

RCPC initially focused its concern on making sure the project was appropriate to its urban location. More recently, concern has shifted to pressing Safeway to improve the project's transit, bicycle, and pedestrian accessibility, especially given its location near the Rockridge and Macarthur BART stations. Obviously, the more people who use alternatives to the private auto to access the center, the less will be its traffic impacts.

A meeting between Safeway and local community group representatives for Safeway to present its latest project plan revisions was scheduled for just after Labor Day. RCPC is hopeful those revisions will continue to show responsiveness to community concerns.

College Avenue Store Replacement In Its Haste to Start Construction, Safeway Violates Agreement

by Stuart Flashman, RCPC Land Use Committee chair

Demolition of the old Safeway store at College and Claremont Avenues has begun, and Safeway is barreling ahead towards starting construction of its new shopping center. Unfortunately, in its haste, Safeway overlooked a key provision in the settlement it reached last winter with RCPC and two other community groups.

The agreement, reached after many hours of arduous negotiations, calls for Safeway to meet with representatives of the three groups – RCPC, Friends and Neighbors of College Avenue (FANS), and Berkeleyans for Pedestrian Oriented Development (BPOD) – to discuss any major design changes between the plans approved by the city in December and the drawings that would guide the actual construction of the store. That meeting was to happen before Safeway submitted its application for a building permit to the city. Its purpose was to allow the community groups to comment on the changes and resolve any disagreements about whether they were warranted. In case of disagreement, the groups could ask the city to review, and potentially reject, the changes.

Apparently, Safeway never told the construction manager about the provision, so he went ahead and submitted the permit application without any meeting. Upon learning of the breach, the groups contacted the city's planning department. Pete Vollman, the planner handling the project, agreed to suspend processing the permit until the required meeting occurred.

That meeting, scheduled for September 4 at City Hall, is to allow the groups to review ◆ Safeway Violates Agreement, page 12

RCPC Land Use Committee

The RCPC Land Use Committee meets the fourth Wednesday of the month at the Rockridge Branch Library, upstairs meeting room, 7:30 p.m.

Next meeting: Wednesday, September 25. Topics will include an update on the College Avenue Safeway and Rockridge Shopping Center projects, and further discussion of the city's off-street parking report.

Agendas: Please check with committee chair Stu Flashman, 652-5373, or e-mail stufash@aol.com the week before the meeting for an updated agenda.

Land Use Update

by Stuart Flashman, RCPC Land Use Committee chair

■ Residential Off-street Parking Study, Citywide Rezoning, Phase 2

In support of revisions to the city's off-street parking requirements for new construction as part of citywide rezoning, the city conducted a study of off-street parking for multifamily residential buildings. The study looked at the behavior of 294 Oakland households in 11 residential buildings in the Fruitvale, Jack London Square, and Telegraph Avenue areas. (The buildings include 815 units, but only about a third of the households responded.)

The study was designed to examine residents' existing use of off-street parking and evaluate their attitudes towards incentives to reduce private car ownership. The results would be part of deciding whether to reduce off-street parking requirements for new residential construction. A similar study is planned to evaluate commercial off-street parking requirements.

While suggestive, the study produced few clear-cut results. Not surprisingly, buildings without off-street parking (generally older buildings) had lower rates of car ownership. Two buildings located close to the Fruitvale BART station also had lower car ownership and higher transit use. The results also seemed to indicate that a small but significant proportion of residents might respond to incentives such as free transit passes or higher parking costs by giving up at least some of their private cars. RCPC plans to review and provide detailed comments on the study.

To read and comment on the study, find it on-line at: <http://www2.oaklandnet.com/Government/o/PBN/OurOrganization/PlanningZoning/OAK030572>, or by calling planner Darin Ranelletti at 238-3663 or e-mailing DRanelletti@oaklandnet.com. Creek to Bay Day, the Rockridge-Temescal Way

by Leonora Sea, DMV Neighbors

Creek to Bay Day is Oakland's annual Stewardship event and celebration of our urban waterways; this year it coincides with the autumnal equinox on September 21.

It's time to welcome autumn to the Rockridge-Temescal Greenbelt, and to gather, get acquainted, and get our own Temescal Creek ready for winter.

The DMV Neighbors Association is coordinating Creek to Bay Day, Saturday, September 21, at the creek from 9 a.m. to noon. Sign in at the corner of Redondo and Cavour. Volunteers will be treated to pastries and coffee at the sign-in table. Families and groups are welcome.

We'll sweep, prune overgrowth, pull ivy, remove blackberries and weeds, spread mulch, pick up litter, and remove roots, silt, and debris from the creek channel. Plan to stay after we're done for snacks, drinks, and conversation on the lawn under the trees.

For more info, contact Leonora Sea, DMV Neighbors Association, leonorasea@yahoo.com, or look up Temescal creek on the city's Creek to Bay Day web site: www.oaklandcreektobay.org.

Kids Paint Plaques to Help Dog Park Renovation

by Becky Alseth, local resident

Hardy Dog Park got a splash of color in late August thanks to more than 60 children from College Avenue Presbyterian Church's Vacation Bible School summer program. The kids painted dozens of temporary plaques to adorn the park's fence, adding a refreshing vibrancy to the otherwise dreary space.

The campaign generated $7,000 in contributions for Scenic Streets, the local volunteer landscaping group that is leading a renovation of Oakland's oldest and most dilapidated dog park. Dozens of residents and businesses sponsored one of a selection of youthful works of art offered in a choice of bone, fire hydrant and dog shapes.

"During each of our summer sessions, we have the kids participate in community improvement projects," explains Pastor Monte McClain. "Painting plaques to help raise money for the local dog park was a lot of fun for the children and helped them realize they can make a difference in their neighborhood."

Funds raised were matched dollar for dollar by Dreyer's Grand Ice Cream, a supporter of Scenic Streets' other nearby landscaping projects as well. Local volunteer Robin Binaoro says the campaign puts the group closer to achieving its goals of improving the safety, access and functionality of the dog park.

Binaoro acknowledged that many plaque sponsors, like himself, don't even own dogs or use the park. "But so many of us drive by it every day and wonder why it has to be such a bleak space," he said.

"Residents realized that the improvements we have proposed, such as adding shade loving trees and shrubs to the dog park, will greatly enhance the gateway to Rockridge."

The renovation plans are being reviewed by city officials currently and can be viewed at scenicstreets.org.

Rollover Collision at Controversial Intersection Sparks Calls for Action

by Nancy Schaaf, local resident

Two vehicles collided at the intersection of Claremont Avenue and Hudson Street on Sunday, July 18, causing a small SUV to roll onto its roof in the crosswalk that spans the entrance to the highway ramp. This latest incident at the notoriously dangerous intersection has residents calling for more pedestrian safeguards near Frog Park and

Hardy Park Dog Run.

"Motorists approach the on-ramp like they are getting ready for take-off. They have little regard for pedestrians in the crosswalks or bicyclists on the streets" says Tom Hull, a nearby resident. "It's surprising there aren't more accidents here. The city needs to take action before someone gets killed."

In fact, the city of Oakland does have an action plan in place to study the area.

Kristine Shaff, spokesperson for the Public Works Department, says that additional safety enhancements are currently being considered for the near term, such as enhancing signage and altering traffic light timing.

More robust safeguards may take a while longer. The intersection is tentatively slated to receive substantial Neighborhood Crime Prevention Council; Neighborhood Watch. What's the Difference?

Editor's Note: A recent posting on the Rockridge Neighborhood Watch group stated a common concern: "I don't know what the difference is between the RockridgeNCPC and RockridgeNeighborhoodWatch groups." Below are brief statements about the differences and similarities of the groups, and links to more information, compiled from site-specific searches. To join the Yahoo-hosted RockridgeNeighborhoodWatch group itself, go to <http://groups.yahoo.com/group/RockridgeNeighborhoodWatchNetwork/>

What Is NCPC?

A Neighborhood Crime Prevention Council (NCPC) is made up of you and your neighbors working together and in partnership with the Oakland Police Department (OPD) and other city agencies to address ongoing problems in your neighborhood.

NCPCs generally choose three priorities for the Oakland Police Department Problem Solving Officers (PSO). The Neighborhood Services Coordinator, PSOs, beat officer, and other city agencies work together and with the NCPC to develop and implement a strategy for addressing the priorities. OPD also reports back to the NCPC about progress on the priorities until the problems are resolved or changed.

Throughout the city, NCPCs are organized on the basis of their area's police beat. Rockridge is covered by beats 12Y and 13X. Residents in the beat area staff and run the group. All neighborhood residents are invited to attend its meetings.

Monthly meetings of the Greater Rockridge NCPC (GRNCPC) are usually held on the second Thursday of each month at the Rockridge Branch Library, 5366 College Avenue.

Find more information at the GRNCPC web site: <http://www.rockridgencpc.com/>

What Is Neighborhood Watch?

A Neighborhood Watch group is a partnership between a self-selected group of neighbors and the Oakland Police Department to improve safety and prevent crime.

After holding two Neighborhood Watch meetings, preparing a map and roster of the neighborhood members, selecting a block captain and alternate, and registering this information with the city's Neighborhood Watch Coordinator, the group of neighbors are designated a neighborhood watch group. Street signs identifying the area as home to a watch group are posted.

The block captain and the alternate are liaisons between the watch group and the police department, making sure the map and roster are complete and the Neighborhood Watch signs are installed. The liaisons also schedule meetings, maintain the membership roster and map, and distribute flyers or other information as provided by the police department.

Call Neighborhood Watch Coordinator Brenda Ivey at 510/238-3091 for more information. Visit the web site: <http://www2.oaklandnet.com/Government/o/CityAdministration/d/NSD/s/BLP/s/NW/>

Eyes on Rockridge

That Porta-Potty in your yard could land your kitchen on the tour

by Judith Doner Berne

‘She smiles when she talks about kitchens.’

That’s what my 18-year-old granddaughter said after she sat in on my interview with Natalie Mehta, chair of the Rockridge Community Planning Council’s (RCPC) 10th Rockridge Kitchen Tour.

This year’s event, to be held between 12:30 and 5:30 p.m. Sunday, September 29, is Mehta’s third go-round as either chair or co-chair of the biennial event. Other years, she’s been a docent, welcoming tour-goers and offering details about the kitchens they are viewing.

“I probably look at two dozen kitchens (ahead of each tour) and we accept nine,” said Mehta, who is also active on the Chabot Elementary School PTA board and the RCPC Land Use Committee. “Whenever I see a Porta-Potty outside a house I write down the address.”

Ironically, one of the portable restrooms was outside Mehta’s house on the day of our interview. You guessed it: She and her husband, Manish, are re-doing their 1939-era kitchen.

“I’ve been mentally planning this since we moved into this house in February 2002,” she says. Since then, they made its narrow, Pullman-style layout work even as their family grew to include Anand, 11, Maya, 9, and Aidan, 7.

“The ceiling looked like the inside of an old Chevy Impala,” she describes. “The sizing that covered the lath and plaster had split and was sagging down the center. The rest of the kitchen had yellow tile with burgundy tile accent liners, a yellow tile backsplash and a dark brown heavily worn and stained vinyl floor.”

Further, she says, “Someone had tiled over the counter surface of the two existing built-ins with small mosaic tile in the shape and color of cat kibble – with thick dark brown grout to add to the ambience. A blue border featured white ducks with yellow feet. Oh yes, it was a real beauty!”

Beyond that, there was no dishwasher or garbage disposal. “I haven’t had a dishwasher since I left for college at 17,” Mehta says, somewhat proudly, although that is about to change.

But although she is modernizing, the effect won’t be modern. It will reflect what RCPC Kitchen Tour chair Natalie Mehta knows first-hand the trials of a kitchen remodeler. Relocated temporarily to the basement, the family’s kitchen equipment is split between two small rooms as their main kitchen is remodeled. /JUDITH BERNE

she holds true: “What I love about old kitchens is they are super-efficient.”

Yes, she’s culled ideas through the years from the kitchens she’s visited.

“The biggest thing is adjusting the layout to your needs,” she says. You are often encouraged to, for example, keep the sink where it is. It might cost a little more, but she has seen that “kitchens often work so much better if we change the layout.”

Mehta has also relied on the Internet as well as what catches her eye, such as the display shelves she spied at Berkeley’s Tail of the Yak that she had duplicated to hold her array of old canning jars.

“It’s probably rooted with my grandmother,” mused Mehta, who was born in Australia but grew up in the South Bay. “I never really thought about that. She always stored everything in jars.

“I also wanted vintage lighting in the kitchen,” Natalie said. “No cans.” She was struck by fixtures designed with old x-ray shades that she saw in a San Francisco restaurant and was able to track down Vanessa Bell of Berkeley’s Omega Lighting Design, who created a vintage fixture for her kitchen.

During construction, the Mehtas have set up a make-shift kitchen in their basement where they already had an under-counter refrigerator and sink. Their old stove, microwave and toaster ovens are in one room, the refrigerators and sink in another.

“I’m using two pans, two pots and a colander,” Mehta says. “And we’ve been totally fine.”

So two years from now, can we expect to see their completed kitchen on the Rockridge Kitchen tour? “We will never be on the tour,” she says with a laugh. “That would be a marriage-ender.”

Typically, the event draws upwards of 500 people (the record was around 800) who pay $35 in advance or $40 the day of the tour. “It’s mostly women, but there are a number of men,” Mehta says. “Most of the people are from Rockridge or Piedmont and are contemplating re-doing their kitchens. But there are people who come year after year.”

Mehta took over from Susan Montauk, who founded the kitchen tour in 1995 and led it through 2009. “I always loved it, but it was time,” Montauk says. “Natalie had worked with us. I thought she was terrific. She does more of the work herself than I did. She’s amazing.”

It’s the RCPC’s principal source of funds, raising, on average, $20,000 for community projects. They include the restroom facilities at Frog Park, benches along College Avenue and the re-designed Rockridge BART Plaza.

"I love people's stories about their kitchens," Mehta says, stories that are recapped in the tour brochure along with the photographs she selects from those taken by professional photographer Kelly Patrick Dugan. Both are shared with the tour committee which tries to select a variety of styles while keeping the tour fairly walkable.

"This year two houses are right next to each other," Mehta says.

"I think the best thing about the tour is while there's variety, there's also similarity" because so many of the houses are from the same era, she says. That makes it easier to envision a kitchen you like in your own house.

Probably her most frustrating experience was two years ago when a kitchen she featured on the advertising poster was withdrawn because the homeowner was suddenly transferred. "The posters had already been printed and distributed," she says.

"Homeowners change their minds, docents bail," says Nancy Sale, who has been in charge of gathering the more than 40 docents from the tour's inception.

"Natalie is very well organized and very patient," Sale reports. "She inherited a blueprint (from founder Montauk), but she's made some improvements. She's a real smart person."

HIPSTER FARE: THE NEW FOOD REVOLUTION

Restaurant critics often refer to the current post-Chez Panisse food revolution as the snout-to-tail craze, the farm-to-table movement, the return of retro cocktails and the new comfort food.

Starting in the Williamsburg neighborhood of Brooklyn, the hipster restaurant movement has come to Oakland in full force. Oakland is often referred to as the new Brooklyn. As a Brooklyn transplant, I find this all most amusing.

Oakland neighborhoods like Rockridge, Temescal Triangle and Uptown, have become ground zero for some of the hottest and hippest restaurants in California. Millennials or hipsters have emerged as a distinct demographic subculture with an edgy focus on food, art, and music. You often see tattooed hipsters snapping photos of their food and sending them out on Facebook or other social media sites. The young chefs at these restaurants are pushing the boundaries of culinary creativity. The menus defy simple categories such as Cal-Med, Asian fusion, or modern Italian. From food trucks to small and loud downsized restaurants in emerging urban neighborhoods, hipster fare has created a new food revolution.

On College Avenue, the Ramen Shop is a hipster's delight. A short menu offering locally sourced and house-made ingredients is a "noodle slurper's" ideal meal. How can you beat the Meyer lemon ramen and pork belly?

Down the street is the newly expanded Toast featuring innovative cocktails and small plates. Originally started as a wine bar, Toast has reinvented itself as a cocktail and lunch and dinner spot. Next door, the soon-to-open Box and Bells from Michelin chef James Syhabout of Commis and Hawker Fare fame, promises to be a new Rockridge destination mecca. Opening is set for late summer. Chef James will be offering a new hipster trend of staff meals from the Commis kitchen.

The newest addition to the surging Temescal Triangle is the ultra-small Juhu Beach Club from Top Chef finalist Preeti Mistry. Juhu Beach Club features street food from Chef Preeti's hometown of Mumbai. Juhu's menu features unique Pav combos. Pavs are slider-sized sandwiches with fillings such as smoky black cardamom-braised short ribs or pulled pork in a vindaloo BBQ sauce – very yummy.

Oakland's most booming dining destination is, of course, the hot and happening Uptown. Restaurants like Hopscotch, Marrow, Flora, Hawker Fare, Duende, and Luka's Taproom are creating a buzz throughout the Bay Area Twitter crowd.

The only warning I have is for the more-senior diner: the noise level of these restaurants can be high. Food at these hipster spots is worth trying, but the noise level can be a distraction.

I'm not sure Oakland is the new Brooklyn, but the emerging food scene is certainly putting the city on the culinary map.

Quirky burgers made with locally sourced grass-fed beef are the go-to bite for the Twitter and tattoo crowd. Check this month's recipe for a unique take on the hipster burger.

The media may provide market data from recent 'months', but it is key to keep up on the very latest activity. After 18 months of prices rising sharply, prices may have peaked a couple of months ago. This is likely due to a combination of buyer fatigue, modest increases in interest rates, and our typical late summer slow-down. It is still a strong and stable market, with a bit of the edge taken off the exuberance. Stay tuned as the fall inventory increases!

Local Community Garden Now in 13th Year

by Greer Alley, Rockridge resident

Our neighborhood on Ocean View Drive between Broadway and Margarido has a magnet that we all refer to as the community Garden. This is a story about that long block of neighbors in Rockridge that came together as a community to celebrate, to work, and to join each other as a neighborhood around our garden.

Thirteen years ago, our garden area was an abandoned space between sidewalk and street. Barren and full of leaves, electrical panels and trash, it was not an inviting entrance to our little community. Then, more than 15 neighbors came together to excavate, amend soil, set boulders, install temporary irrigation and plant. Materials were purchased by the neighborhood or through donations from local nurseries and Acapulco Rock and Soil in Richmond.

Since that summer of 2000, we have had an annual December holiday party to watch the lights go on in the trees and decorate them with wonderful outdoor ornaments given to us by a neighbor living many blocks away. Neighbors install the tree lights prior to the party. Then, working from the shoulders of adults, kids decorate the trees and the adults bring appetizers and drinks to share. We invite everyone on our block: From new homeowners and renters to old-timers, everyone is welcome.

Over the years, the garden has been tended by a group of Garden Guardians. In dry months, the guardians use soaker hoses to keep the garden watered. They weed, prune and pick up debris. A dedicated group, they have not changed their guardian schedule for 12 years.

This year, we received a grant from Keep Oakland Beautiful. With that funding, we purchased materials for a permanent drip irrigation system that will use water supplied by a generous neighbor.

On Mother's Day, eight neighbor men installed the new system, and the plants are thriving.

The community garden continues to evolve. Trees reach adolescence. Native plants thrive. Weeds grow. Cigarette butts are thrown and picked up. We have never had vandalism, graffiti or trauma to our garden. Yet, as happens in nature, an aspect of urban gardening has cropped up: gophers have discovered the garden.

Rockridge Branch Library: Thank You, Library Friends, for Support

by Erica Siskind, children's librarian

We'd like to thank the Friends of the Rockridge Library for the special programs and resources for children they've funded this past year. The projects have been much appreciated by our patrons and have enhanced the experience of every visitor to the library. Many members of the community have contributed to FORL, so this thank-you goes to you all.

This spring, we conducted three parenting workshops on topics of interest to families with the very youngest children; Sleep Issues, Yoga with Baby, and Infant Massage. During the last session, we got a great idea for next year: Massage for Moms – where kids ages 3 to 13 learn some great hands-on techniques for helping their moms relax. The final workshop in this series was Language and Brain Development in Children.

May was Asian and Pacific Islanders Heritage Month, the perfect time to share our Kamishibai stories. On the first Tuesday night of May, families came for an extended story time, followed by Japanese candy – the traditional end of a visit by the Kamishibai story teller. All through the month, Erica performed Kamishibai stories for class visits (using the beautiful wooden box-stage purchased by FORL) and talked to students about this special story format that interconnects the histories of children's books, Japanese street theater, and manga and anime.

FORL has instrumentally supported our summer reading program for more than a decade, by funding our intern, a library trainee just finishing 11th grade who works at the Rockridge Library in June, July, and August. The intern makes sure the summer reading program runs smoothly by supervising volunteers, keeping track of prizes, and, effectively, doubling our ability to help young patrons.

FORL once again has made it possible for the Rockridge Library to host extra summer performances – above and beyond what the library general fund provides – to joyful and enthusiastic crowds. When you came to a show this summer – many held on Tuesday nights – know that FORL funds supported the program series.

In addition, FORL provides small gifts for our Junior Volunteers. These are neighbors ages 11 to 17 who help out with the summer reading program. Over 1,000 kids sign up for the program every summer, and we need help to register everyone, explain how to participate, and distribute prizes. The Junior Volunteers are a crack team of experts who spend between 10 and 40 hours of their summer vacation helping out at the library. Things run more smoothly because these junior volunteers help sort books and DVDs to get them back on the shelves during our busiest season. We know that everyone in the community wants them to feel appreciated for their hard work, sharp skills, and enthusiasm.

This fall, FORL will be funding a series of craft workshops for kids ages 5 to 12. When you came to the library this summer for one of our special events, to get prizes for reading, or just to check out whatever you like, I hope you got a quick peek at the farm diorama in the Children's Area, too. It's a favorite with preschoolers. From all the patrons of our library; Thanks, Friends!

Coming Soon to Frog Park: Survey Choices, New Swings, More

by Carol Behr, FROG chair

Based on your FROG priorities survey responses, the Friends of the Rockridge-Temescal Greenbelt (FROG) committee members are working on the number one interest: more swings. FROG continues to plan and work through the survey results list.

Swings for the Park

FROG hired MIG, Landscape Architecture & Green Infrastructure, a landscape architect and park design firm, to help assess and identify locations for swing placement in the park, and to recommend swings and creative features. The firm has already recommended that the new swings be located next to or near the current swings and has drafted several design options, including various configurations of these new features:

- Two baby swings
- Two more regular swings
- Some exciting additional play features that may fit into the budget.

FROG is working closely with the city, and has met with MIG, Fourth Bore Coalition members, RCPC and others to secure funding sources, minimize project management costs, and begin planning.

Fourth Bore settlement funds will be used for park improvements, though possible additional funding may be needed.

Coming: Share Your Preferences and Comments

- LATE SEPTEMBER: Sunday table set up in the park, to show the plans and get the community's input
- OCTOBER: Join our community meeting at RCPC's town hall to discuss the different options and provide input: Rockridge Library, 2nd floor, October 17.

View plans online: www.frogpark.org. E-mail us with questions and comments or to volunteer: info@frogpark.org. For the latest survey information, visit www.frogpark.org and sign-up for our mailing list.

DMV Restoration Update

Final phases of the DMV restoration will begin in late September when the DMV continues its promised restoration, including planting 13 new trees and shrubs along the DMV Creekside. All that remains is to install one new picnic table next to the existing one on a date to be determined.

More than two years ago, the DMV agreed to restore the area after cutting down several large trees in the DMV parking lot and creek area without prior notice. With extensive input from local residents, the FROG committee and the community, the DMV restoration plan was finalized as a three phase process.

The first phase was planting the DMV parking lot trees; the second phase was installing additional boulders; the final phase is the new and replaced trees and additional picnic table that will serve park visitors, farmers market and DMV patrons.

Review the plan: www.frogpark.org. Request information or volunteer, e-mail: info@frogpark.org.

More Park News: First Saturday Cleanups Continue

September marks the one year anniversary of the "First Saturday" monthly Frog Park cleanups. Based on its success, FROG plans to continue the program for another year.

Highlights include: adding sand to both sandboxes, distributing wood chips throughout the Big Frog park area for a safer play time, surveying park users, beginning the replanting of our butterfly garden, widening the creek bed to prevent flooding, tree trimming, general cleaning and mulching.

This program relies on support from Oakland Tech's BuildOn club, which reached out to FROG last year to propose these workdays. Likewise, volunteers from the Berkeley Kiwanis and UC Berkeley Circle K Clubs are essential to FROG operations. The College Avenue Presbyterian Church summer camps provided much-needed summer maintenance.

All "First Saturday" cleanups are family-friendly. We provide tools. Meet at Big Frog Park, Hudson Street and Claremont Avenue, from 9 a.m.-12 p.m. (Note the new time) Thank you all. We look forward to a continued partnership.

Fall Maintenance Day

FROG thanks all community members who have pitched in to help on our workdays. Frog Park was built by Rockridge residents and we are honored by your continued energy efficiency of China's growing cities. He will also highlight the application of these same successful planning elements reflected throughout Rockridge.

■ Please RSVP to: info@rockridge.org – put "Calthorpe" in the title line, or phone 869-4200. For this special event, Jules Thin Crust Pizza, new to College Avenue, will be served with other light refreshments.

■ The evening will conclude with a raffle of two copies of Calthorpe's most recent book, "Urbanism in the Age of Climate Change," in which he explains how sustainable urban development can play a key role in reducing carbon emissions.

Mr. Calthorpe often cites the Rockridge neighborhood to illustrate the positive environmental and social impacts that mixed-use, high-density development can have on an urban setting.

In his response to blogger Scott London's question, "In a nutshell, how would you describe good urban design?," Calthorpe explains that "a well-designed city is walkable. It's a place where your destinations are close enough to walk to and where you feel safe enough to walk. And it's a place that is interesting enough socially to make you feel that walking is perhaps something more than just getting from point A to point B. I think that is the heart of it."

Since the formation of Calthorpe Associates in 1983, Peter Calthorpe's scope has expanded to include innovative design projects within the United States and abroad. His work reflects how community design with a focus on environmental sustainability and human scale can be adapted in urban and suburban cities with great success. His current task in China focuses on developing standards and examples of low carbon cities.

changes, including significant alterations to the retail building's design and an increase in the height of the building's Claremont Avenue frontage.

The building's architect and Rockridge resident Ken Lowney, who has not been involved in preparing the construction drawings, is compiling a list of the major design changes, and has indicated that he has misgivings about some of them.

The three groups hope to reach an agreement with Safeway so the project can get back on track towards construction.

owners foot most (about 80 percent) of the total bill, but the city finances the cost of the project, recouping it later from owners via a property assessment. The assessment must be approved by a vote of at least 60 percent of affected property owners.

An estimate for the total cost of a financed Rule 20B undergrounding is about $2,300 per year per property for 30 years.

improvements funded by the CalTrans settlement over the Caldecott Tunnel's fourth bore. However, the project barely made the list for funding, so formal plans won't be undertaken for approximately another two years, says Shaff.

Peter Lund, founder of Scenic Streets,

While this price tag might seem steep, it can be tax deductible in many cases. Also, state or federal grants can be sought to reduce the bill. For example, FEMA has contributed funds through its Hazard Mitigation Grants Program towards utility undergrounding in some (non-Oakland) areas.

Whether it is through a speedy, mostly privately financed 20B undergrounding, or a more time consuming (but less burdensome for property owners) 20A project, it is time Rockridge joined the other Oakland neighborhoods in modernizing our utility line infrastructure.

says he raised concerns about the intersection with then-Councilmember Jane Brunner after his volunteers saw a bicyclist struck by a truck last year.

The group was pushing for a ticket camera that would discourage speeding and incomplete stops, common violations at the heart of the problem. But Lund says Brunner indicated an OPD study had concluded this intersection did not meet the criteria to make the device economically viable.

In the meantime, it will simply be up to motorists to obey the law. Shaff claims that many do not realize that even entering a crosswalk occupied by a pedestrian is illegal.

Nearby neighbors report frequent fender benders at the intersection, but OPD sources say records show surprisingly few reports on file, suggesting that many collisions are not being reported.

Adults and teens can stop by until 3 p.m. Saturday, September 7, to help with the jobs: clean and seal wooden play structures; turn wood chips; sift sand; clear the creek; remove graffiti; general cleaning.
