Festive Holiday Shopping Starts In Rockridge

by Jody Colley, Rockridge District Association

With the holiday season upon us, the excitement of heartfelt giving while gathering with loved ones fills the air. Although online shopping might offer convenience for distant recipients, there's something deeply unmatched about sourcing your holiday shopping and experiences in the local community, particularly in a neighborhood as vibrant and eclectic as Rockridge.

It's hard not to whistle your favorite holiday tunes as you stroll along tree-lined College Avenue, soaking in the charm created by a diverse selection of boutique shops in all their holiday décor and shine. Rockridge offers a perfect setting for a holiday shopping experience that's as personal as it is meaningful.

Zenbooth Arrives at the Rockridge Library

by Alona Rivord, Friends of the Rockridge Library

A new study booth is now available for booking at the Rockridge Branch of the Oakland Public Library. Located on the second floor, the Zenbooth provides a private workspace for individuals or small groups. It is equipped with a table and three chairs, motion-activated lights, power outlets, and a ventilation system.

"The reaction has been overwhelmingly positive," said Branch Manager Brian Guenther. "As expected, folks are using it for virtual meetings and quiet study. We've also seen it being used for one-on-one tutoring and online therapy sessions."

Guenther says that the Zenbooth is being booked up to six times per day and has gained in popularity since it was installed in August by the Berkeley-based manufacturer.

Looking for something therapeutic that promotes nature, reduces stress, improves mood, enhances cognitive function, and instills a sense of purpose and accomplishment? “A houseplant is the gift that keeps on giving. Its growth and beauty are a reminder of care, patience, and the joy of nurturing something new throughout the year,” says Yumi Day, co-owner of Planterday (6004 College Ave.). As a bonus, the shop donates a portion of all proceeds to the Crisis Support Services of Alameda County.

If gently used items are your style, Bambino Thrift (5290 College Ave.) goes all out for the holiday season with winter fashions, housewares, vintage and decorative items, works of art, glassware, jewelry, footwear, toys, games, and more. Your purchases support a great cause — all proceeds go to UCSF Children’s Hospital Oakland.

The Wardrobe Project (5461 College Ave.) carries a selection of used vintage and modern clothing, and local artisan wares. “We love the holidays. It is a way to highlight the local makers and vendors in our shop, like Upperline Vintage with vintage decor and home goods; Bengal Jewelry/ Undecided Studios with their hand-made jewelry; and Fonzie’s Artisanal Goods’ hand-poured candles,” says shop owner Talia Brown.

Home entertaining gets seriously elevated with a gift of barware from Maison d’Etre (5640 College Ave.). “Our barware selection is both stylish and functional, ideal for the entertainer who appreciates high-quality glassware and accessories, from coasters to cocktail shakers,” says Lily Sosnowski, business owner. Rapti's reversible cashmere shawl at In Full Swing.

When asked what is a popular gift at In Full Swing (5937 College Ave.) this season, proprietor Sharon Silverstein says it is the Rapti reversible cashmere shawls. "They come in a variety of gorgeous colors and prints that are fair-trade and handmade in Nepal. Made from 100 percent high-quality cashmere, they retail for $90. It's the perfect winter layer that can be worn over a tee, sweater, or jacket."

Give a gift that warms both the heart and the feet. "We carry a large selection of the popular brand Uggs and we offer free gift wrapping," says Liz Taylor, owner of Tootsies Rockridge (5525 College Ave.).

Carol Fabretti, owner of Sole Terra Shoes (5933 College Ave.), suggests one of their Birkenstock, Olukai, or Taos slippers made with sustainable wool and shearling. We also carry cozy socks from Smartwool and Socksmith made with hypoallergenic wool and bamboo or cotton in beautiful, fun patterns."

Davines hair products are an excellent option for the diva on your list. "Davines has a long history of great products that are formulated and packaged using renewable energy and a neutral carbon footprint. They offer products for all hair textures and styles," says Elizabeth Herzberg, owner of elizabeth H the art of hair design (5431 College Ave.). Her salon, like many others on College Avenue, has haircare, body, and beauty products, along with professional expertise to help you pick.

Looking for a chance to do something good for your neighbors — housed and unhoused — with friends and family this holiday season? Consider volunteering at College Avenue Presbyterian Church (5951 College Ave.) to serve a free hot meal, distribute new underclothes and toiletries, and know you're making the world a better place.

Rockridge is home to artisanal coffee roasters, bottle shops, gourmet markets, cheesemongers, bakeries, and chocolatiers that will satisfy any foodie on your list. What is a guaranteed success at any holiday event? "Wine! Specifically local red wines, eclectic imported wines, and Champagne," says Hannah Ermisch, wine manager at Vino! (6319 College Ave.). "Our wines are all from small growers around the world, creating a unique selection to pick from. Wine is the perfect gift for any holiday party."

You can pair any wine selection with a gift basket from Rockridge Market Hall (5655 College Ave.). "We have designed new gift basket offerings that feature charcuterie, cheese, truffles, baking pantry items, and local offerings," says Julie Uruburu, food director.

What's a holiday without Panettone? It takes 48 hours to make this Italian bread, and it is a hand-crafted holiday specialty at Starter Bakery (5804 College Ave.). "It is available in two flavors, Traditional and Chocolate Orange. We make it using a unique slow fermentation process, and the result is a buttery, rich bread with a light and tender golden crumb," explains Annelies Zijderveld. "Be sure to pre-order it."

delicious chocolates. The Xocolate Bar (5854 College Ave.) offers in-house-made artisan chocolate using organic, fair-trade and natural ingredients. "Our gift boxes are available in 4, 9 or 16 piece and we have sweets for all ages," says Frances Fernandez, general manager.

While we could offer more gift suggestions, explore and experience what Rockridge has to offer for yourself. Bring a friend with you, enjoy a nice dinner, and know you are helping to strengthen the local economy as you go. In a world where mass-produced gifts are the norm, there's something truly special about receiving a gift that is unique and meaningful.

Perhaps when giving your gift, you'll have a smile and a story to share about where you found it, how it was made, and why it was special. After all, when you shop in Rockridge, you're not just buying gifts, you're sharing our community. ■

Patrons can reserve the 7' x 7' booth for one hour per day. It can accommodate a maximum of four people. Reservations can be made in the Meeting and Study Rooms section of the Oakland Public Library website or in person at the branch.

Users must check in and out with library staff who lock the booth when it is not in use. Patrons must also leave their library card or an ID at the reference desk and are asked to respect the space and the time limit.

The Rockridge booth is one of only a few such spaces available in the Oakland Public Library system. The 81st Avenue branch has two study rooms for up to six people each that can be reserved in two-hour blocks.

Zenbooth was made possible by donations from the community to the Friends of the Rockridge Library. ■

Visit Market Hall — for Gifts, Raclette Saturdays, and More

By Roberta Klugman

What's happening at Market Hall Foods this coming holiday? Gifts, like house favorite olio nuovo — fresh, bright, and the first of the season's new olive oil harvest.

Holiday-packaged bread and confections are available in glorious seasonal wrapping: Struca, panettone, pandoro, panforte, lebkuchen, and more. The bakery's holiday desserts include the Uncommonly Good Fruitcake, stollen, and Bûche de Noël.

Market Hall cheesemonger, Calvin.

Raclette Saturdays offer hot, aromatic raclette (melted cheese) over tasty accompaniments. This event has been very popular and will continue just outside Market Hall every Saturday in December from noon–3pm.

Check out the holiday offerings, now through New Year's, throughout Rockridge Market Hall shops. For ordering deadlines, pickup days, holiday hours, and more visit <https://rockridgemarkethall.com/holidays>. Market Hall will ship culinary gifts and baskets nationwide. ■

Shop Local at Peralta Elementary's Makers Market

The End of An Era For 118-Year-Old Black Walnut Tree

by Anna L. Marks

The Black Walnut tree stood tall and graceful for over a century at 5380 Shafter Avenue, a testament to nature’s artistry and a cherished icon in the neighborhood. According to Gola Fry Woods, one of two sisters who grew up in the Victorian home where the tree stood, the seedling had been brought from Michigan in 1906 where it was native. The intention was to graft it to a native English Walnut. Instead, however, it was planted directly into the soil.

Known affectionately as “the grand old lady,” the property where the tree grew was built around 1893. It was one of the first homesteads in Rockridge before the town was annexed to Oakland in the late 1800s. It was designed by architect Leo Nichols at a cost of $3,418.50.

Michigan attorney H.P. Fry purchased the home in 1906, shortly after the big earthquake, and became home to three generations of his family. The 3000+ square foot, 4+ bedroom home (with nearly 1,500 square feet of basement) has seen several owners since — most of them ignored proper caretaking of the tree.

In the early 1960s, the house was divided into three apartments, and Paul Pilgrim and Gerald Roy rented two of them while studying at California College of Arts and Crafts. They purchased the home in 1967 after Roy quietly bought the adjacent property to avoid a speculative sale to developers looking to construct an apartment complex on the double lot. The two spent the next three decades restoring the house back to a single dwelling. Roy had UC Davis arborists inspect the tree about 20 years ago, and found at the time that it had reached its limits.

But had it grown from a transported seedling? Zach Vought of Urban Forestry Associates thinks not.

Upon close inspection, he discovered that the large deciduous tree was actually a native Northern California Black Walnut. He noted that the tree’s structure had become a concern due to a history of poor management, extensive trimming by PG&E due to overlapping power lines, and natural declining vitality.

Vought noted that “the internal decay at the many old pruning wounds is the general structural defect of most concern as it increases the likelihood of branch failures. The tree could be retained and managed by removing the dead limbs and pruning, but the prospects of rehabilitating it to a productive condition aren’t good.” A few other arborist reports came to similar conclusions.

Mark Sherwood purchased the property for his family back in 2019 and has been fixing it up since — reroofing, adding new exterior siding, replacing leaky and damaged windows, adding fresh exterior paint, and the unexpected removal of the tree. He hopes to move in soon, despite the prolonged permit process that has delayed much of the needed work. He was very sad that the tree had to come down.

“I know the feeling of people in the neighborhood who are a little steamed. I get it. I had the same defiance and disbelief when I first was told that the tree was on hospice. On the bright side, we have done extensive research on what iconic tree to plant as a replacement, and, at increased expense, we will be transplanting as mature a tree as possible while still allowing for its root system to take hold.

“We still long for a grand tree for this grand house, with a tree fort, and, one day, a tree swing to complement,” says Sherwood. ■

TNT Strength Voted Best in the East Bay

Congratulations to TNT Strength for being voted best in the East Bay by East Bay Express (October 2024). Known as the personal training studio where people redefine aging by getting in great shape in just two 30-minute workouts per week, they note that the median age of TNT's clients is 50, (their youngest client is 15 years old and their most senior client is 91 years old). TNT Strength has also accumulated more 5-star Google reviews than any other personal training studio in Oakland.

Founders Liam Bauer and Jesse Schmidt credit their success to the incredible synergy within their team. Bauer and Schmidt are joined by strength coaches Eric Fong and Ryan Salcedo, both San Jose State kinesiology grads and former physical therapy aides. Bauer has been in working in the fitness industry since 1988, and Schmidt since 2017. Schmidt currently serves on the board of directors for Oakland Rotary.

In conjunction with running their studio, the two owners also produce the "Truth Not Trends" fitness podcast (available on Apple and Spotify) dedicated to providing science-based exercise and nutrition advice. TNT's mission is to improve health and prevent disease through evidence-based strength training to help people become the best version of themselves.

The brick-and-mortar studio is open Monday through Friday at 5255 College Avenue in Rockridge. Inquiries can be made at tntstrength.com or by calling (510) 768-5421. ■

Dogs of Rockridge

Cassie & Cleo love the holidays. Cleo (top) is a 4-year-old rescue dog from Taiwan. She acts more like a cat and loves to sit with her paws crossed, chase squirrels, and sun soak. Cassie (bottom) is a 3-year-old rescue who is part Great Pyrenees and German shepherd. She loves to steal Chuck-It balls and sing when she hears sirens. You might see these two walking in the neighborhood.

Meet Jazzy. She's 12-years old, but don't tell her that because in her mind she's still a puppy. She's half Maltese and half Yorkshire Terrier, but you can call her a Morkie. Jazzy has lived in three different states and has traveled internationally to three countries, but her best friend is her New Jersey cousin Koko. "Sometime I make pig noises when I get too excited. I love a fluffy blanket and my toy beer. I can be a little shy, but who isn't?"

Local Filmmaker Taps Into Her Own Coming-of-Age Story

by Judith Doner Berne

“Making a film is like a miracle,” says first-time filmmaker Lauren Shapiro. “I love every second of it.” Rockridge resident Shapiro, at age 40, is pursuing her dream of telling a story she wrote more than ten years ago based on her coming-of-age experience. Entitled Still Life, it depicts how she, as a 15-year-old, coped over six months before, during, and after her mother’s death from cancer at age 47.

She titled it Still Life, “not only because it offers a portrait of a very specific place and time that ultimately alters (and in many ways arrests) the course of the main character’s life, but also because it examines how daily life continues to unfold, still, even in the face of a monumental trauma. Still Life is also, of course, a life being told in stills.”

Lauren Shapiro, for whom “ballet was a really important part of my life,” directing a scene from her coming-of-age film.

The 98-minute film, expected to be released in mid-2025, is promoted as: “A late ’90s Bay Area coming-of-age romantic-comedy-drama about loving while losing, and living in the liminal (that stage between childhood and adulthood).” If “liminal” sounds like a psychological term, it’s probably because Shapiro has a doctorate in developmental psychology from UC Santa Cruz, following up her undergraduate psychology degree from UC Berkeley. She taught in the doctoral program at The Wright Institute, a graduate school of psychology in Berkeley, from 2014 to 2021, when she followed her heart into filmmaking.

“The seeds were planted by my parents who said, ‘When something bad happens, do a story about it.’ I wanted to be a writer at an early age.” She has a photo of herself taking notes as she watched her mother having her head shaved when she began chemotherapy.

Still Life recounts how a teenager faced with her mother’s death tries to go ahead with her daily life — school, ballet lessons, and falling in love — only to get her heart broken. “I’m trying to show how, at the special time in life in which you are turning 16, your world is collapsing just as it is opening up,” Shapiro said.

Keepsakes from her past authenticate the film. “The lead (Anika Jensen, a UC Irving student from Alameda) is wearing my actual clothing from high school and a lot of the textbooks are mine,” she said. (Jensen’s mother plays Shapiro’s ballet teacher.) “My actual Honors English teacher, Beth Furstenthal, is playing that part in the film.”

“I’m a much older version of myself,” said Furstenthal, now retired from teaching, and has lived in Rockridge for 50 years. “I ran into Lauren walking down Broadway a few years back. She recognized me. It was serendipitous. You see me in two scenes, one in which I call her with condolences. She asked me to try and remember what I had said in the actual phone call all those years ago. You always remember a student who loses a parent.” Furstenthal found her first time in a film fascinating. “I was incredibly impressed because Lauren had never made a movie before.”

“I feel like I have to tell this story,” Shapiro said, which she dedicates to her mother, Reva Shapiro, a motivational speaker, professor, and psychotherapist, who lived in Rockridge before moving to Walnut Creek. Lauren and her family now live in the house where Lauren spent the first six years of her childhood. She met her husband, J.D. Zamfirescu, as a teenager. He’s pursuing his doctorate at UC Berkeley in computer science while teaching programming and electronics at California College of the Arts. Six-year-old daughter, Addie, makes a brief appearance in the film.

“Still Life has been completely community supported,” said Lauren, who used an all-East Bay cast and filmed at East Bay locations as nearby as Contact Records in Temescal Alley and Ellington & French gift shop across from the Claremont Hotel. “I think the story will resonate with many people since loss is a universal experience — and how joy and sorrow can happen at the same time.”

For Billie Nolfi-Makau, a junior at Oakland Tech, appearing in school classroom scenes “was really cool and a good work opportunity.” Active in Tech’s theater program, the Rockridge 16-year-old took part in three days of shooting. Ten-year-old Chabot Elementary student Violet Buch played Lauren’s young cousin.

Lily Fritsch, a junior at Oakland School for the Arts, was another teenage extra. “I’ve never been in a movie, but I was a background dancer in a music video for a school production,” she said. Making friends with the other teenagers in the film was a highlight for Fritsch. “We’re going to have a group watch party when it comes out. Lauren was super nice. My parents thought it was super cool.”

Lauren also considers her film “a love letter to the Bay Area. Where we live is so beautiful, I wanted to share it. The landscape is almost a character itself and also has a symbolic function. This film is really rooted in place.”

“Raising funds for an independent film is an ongoing challenge,” she said. In addition to production, post-production, and publicity costs, film festivals charge fees. Although Lauren wrote, co-produced, and directed Still Life, she had to assume a myriad of other duties as well. “Some days I’m the P.A. (production assistant). I get the coffee and take out the garbage.”

Interested readers can follow the film’s progress and find out how to support it by visiting the website at <https://www.still-life-the-film.com>. ■

Letters to the Editor

Style, and Substance, Matter

Dear Editor: We are seriously concerned about the scope of the project proposal for housing and retail at 5295 College Avenue. We support more housing density in Rockridge but feel strongly that the designs need to fit the style of our existing neighborhood. We have been happy with the recent five-story developments around the intersection of Pleasant Valley and Broadway. Those two buildings merge nicely with the surrounding development and have increased the housing stock in the area.

This proposed 15-story building, rather than integrating smoothly into the surrounding architecture, would break apart the neighborhood feeling, block sun and views for the existing homes in the immediate area, and make that end of College Avenue undesirable for people to move to.

If the reason the developers are proposing such an unsightly tall building is just that it is the only way they think they can make a profit on the project, then we think the City of Oakland should propose designs that enhance our neighborhood and open a bidding process for interested developers. Oakland could work with the School of Architecture at UC Berkeley to design multi-family buildings for Rockridge that would house many more residents without destroying the beauty of our neighborhood.

Please do all you can to help Rockridge grow in a healthy way.

Barbara Morrisette & Philip Rich
Contra Costa Road ■

No More NIMBY-ism

Dear Editor: I read with interest the letters to the editor in the last issue regarding the proposed development at 5295 College Avenue. It was surprising to see so many opposed when I have read many times in the Rockridge News that people support higher density development on College Avenue. Now that there's a proposal, those nearby are opposed.

This unwillingness to accept higher density housing seems to be the definition of NIMBY-ism. I appreciate Sam Fishman's letter in support (September 2024 Rockridge News), and the recognition that there are few opportunities for taller buildings in Rockridge. This College Avenue site is vastly underutilized and would make a great place for an apartment building. While I am not wed to 15 stories, another letter that urged two to five stories seems to miss the potential of this location. I support a robust multi-family residential project on this site.

SOLD in the ELMWOOD!

2822 BENVENUE AVENUE

This Berkeley brown shingle on Benvenue Avenue found its next owners in a private off-market sale. Once in awhile, a property is preparing to come to the market, and the listing agent and the buyers agent just happen to run into one another, and a transaction comes together quietly pre-market. Call it real estate kismet. Or call it the power of the agents' network connections. But when the parties find each other in this way, it is like plucking a needle from a haystack.

One of the sellers is a former colleague of mine from nearly 30 years ago, many years before I was in real estate. It's a good reminder that you never know where your next call will be from! It's a pleasure to be of service to this family.

CollegePrep
A private high school in Oakland

The College Preparatory School is a vibrant day school for grades 9-12 in Oakland's Rockridge neighborhood. At College Prep we believe in the foundational importance of scholarship, the value of dialogue, and the need for academically curious young people to belong to a kind, creative, diverse, and joyful community. We challenge our students to engage deeply in learning, appreciate one another, and grow into adults who are intellectually adventurous, ethically sure-footed, and generous of heart and spirit.

Housing Yes, Highrises No

Dear Editor: As reported recently in the Rockridge News, the City Council will consider the Broadway/College CCA project in December. Upper Broadway Advocates (UBA) has been actively involved, and at first, we opposed the proposed 19 story tower. We advocated for a building no higher than 7-8 stories and for 20 percent affordable units. Mobilizing the community, we conducted two well-attended public meetings at the Rockridge library to learn what residents wanted.

Their calls and letters resulted in a reduction in height, first to 11 stories, and ultimately to the present 7 to 9 stories with 448 units. We have continued to work successfully to improve the design with varied setbacks and roof heights to make the original box-like structure more pleasing. We also asked the City to ensure a stringent Fire Department review of emergency vehicle access and escape routes to be done before building permits are issued.

We will keep monitoring the project to make sure the public park really is accessible (including signs on the Broadway wall saying "This park is open to the public"), and that the traffic study will address the fact that only right-hand turns will be permitted into and out of the site. In the long term, we would love to see a traffic circle on Broadway so that drivers do not cut through neighborhoods.

Our advocacy has resulted in a much better project. However, we failed to increase the number of affordable units. The developer will provide only the legally required minimum, in this case five percent of the units for very low-income residents (a family of four earning up to $77,850). We will continue to advocate for higher minimums for future projects.

Recent State laws that facilitate housing production may have unintended consequences, including allowing highrises even where local zoning laws prohibit them.

As recent Letters to the Editor indicate, many in Rockridge understand and accept the necessity of building mid-rise, dense housing in this community, 5 to 8 stories at appropriate sites, with substantial numbers of affordable units — not just the legally required minimum.

Our slogan is "housing yes, highrises no." Recent State laws that facilitate housing production may have unintended consequences, including allowing highrises even where local zoning laws prohibit them. All the rules are different now. Highrises that could not be built in Rockridge years ago could be built now, despite local ordinances and community opposition.

Our neighborhood is highly desirable, land is expensive, we expect future proposals will be for upscale highrise housing. We must continue to advocate for housing with substantially more affordable units that still recognize and respect the beauty and human scale that make Rockridge so desirable. We can make a difference, we already have. If you share these goals and want to work with us, write to UBAOakland@gmail.com.

Planning Commission Approves Jewish Community Center

By Mark Aaronson, RCPC Board Member

The Oakland Planning Commission voted 4-0 at its November 6 meeting to approve the Jewish Community Center East Bay's (JCCEB) application for community education and community assembly conditional use permits. The Commission decision is now final as no appeal to the Oakland City Council was timely filed.

There were 20 speakers during the public comment period at the Commission hearing, most of them residents of Chabot Road between College and Claremont, the neighborhood block most affected by JCCEB's plans. The proposed new uses for the nearly 3-acre site include a preschool childcare program, educational and cultural programming, rental and nonrental special events, and administrative office space for mainly Jewish nonprofits and charitable organizations. Special events will be held in the former Yoshi's restaurant and jazz club on Claremont. Office and retail store use will continue in the former Dreyer's office building on College.

Special events will be held in the former Yoshi's restaurant and jazz club on Claremont.

For almost three years, Rockridge Community Planning Council

(RCPC) representatives and designees of the most immediately affected neighbors, organized as the Chabot Village, met with JCCEB representatives to discuss traffic, parking, and noise mitigation measures, and related concerns. The Commission's approval came after the JCCEB offered several amendments to the Conditions of Approval that had been raised during these meetings. The most notable amendment involved the elimination of pickleball as a permissible use on the site.

Following the Planning Commission hearing, RCPC and Chabot Village representatives continued to meet with JCCEB representatives. These meetings resulted in the signing of a Community Benefits Agreement on November 15. Provisions in the Agreement include strengthened requirements for vehicle entrance and departure to and from Claremont for special events; limitations on both the number of attendees and the number of programs and special events to be held annually; restrictions on the use and location of outside speakers for amplified sound; and additional measures to reduce the noise impacts of a small ball court adjacent to Chabot Road residences. In addition, the Agreement establishes a Neighborhood Committee that will meet at least semiannually to seek to resolve potential JCCEB site and programmatic issues of Rockridge neighborhood concern. ■

BEST BITES of Rockridge

Monk's Kettle: Monk's Burger 5484 College Avenue

The relocation of Monk's Kettle to Rockridge is a cause for celebration for those of us in the East Bay. As a fan of the original Mission location in San Francisco, I was thrilled to visit their new outpost during their soft opening.

The star of the show at Monk's Kettle has always been the Monk's Burger, a staple that has garnered a devoted following over the years. Eager to see if it lived up to my memories, I ordered this classic dish at the new College Avenue location. I'm happy to report that it did not disappoint.

The patty, cooked to a perfect medium-rare, was juicy and flavorful. The cheese melted seamlessly over the meat, creating that irresistible gooey texture that elevates any great cheeseburger. The bun was fresh and billowy, providing the ideal vessel for this masterpiece.

The sauce, generously applied, added just the right amount of tang and creaminess to complement the other components.

In a nod to healthier choices, I opted for the kale salad instead of fries. To my pleasant surprise, this decision led to an unexpected highlight of the meal. The salad was a revelation— its crisp leaves tossed in an incredibly flavorful dressing. Thinly sliced radishes added a peppery crunch, making this side dish far more than an afterthought.

The newly-opened Monk's Kettle in Rockridge has successfully brought the magic of their old San Francisco location to Oakland. The perfect recreation of their beloved Monk's Burger, coupled with delightful surprises like the stellar kale salad, makes Monk's Kettle a welcome addition to the East Bay's culinary landscape. I can't recommend Monk's Kettle enough and will undoubtedly be returning soon. ■

Help Deliver the Rockridge News: Two Blocks up for Grabs

by Susan Montauk, Rockridge News Distribution Manager

Thanks to Lynn Delaney for her service as Block Captain on Broadway Terrace, and Leila Heid, Block Captain of the 400 block of McAuley. Both Lynn and Leila are ready to pass the baton and hope someone will step up and volunteer so there won't be a break in delivery to their streets.

The job takes about 20 minutes and is a great way to get to know your neighbors. Your residence should be nearby to the route you choose. Please let us know if you are available to take on either of these routes:

- Route 08B: Both sides of Broadway Terrace, odd numbers from Broadway to 5409, even numbers from Broadway to 5400.
- Route 25A3: 400-441 McAuley (Colby to Howell)

Please help: Block Captains deliver newsletters door-to-door. They receive their bundles the first weekend after the first Friday of each month (except for August). Call 510/547-3855 or email Susan at smontauk@gmail.com to volunteer. ■

Safer Rockridge Adds New Board Members

Safer Rockridge, the local nonprofit focused on enhancing neighborhood security, has added three new board members. Diana Calla, Parker Monroe, and Chris Shayne have joined existing member Josh Aycok, who will be transitioning off the board over the next few months.

Established in 2014, Safer Rockridge pools contributions from local households and businesses to provide unarmed patrols and other security services at no charge. The expanded board is focused on boosting community engagement and increasing both the coverage and visibility of the patrol vehicles to provide a more robust deterrent throughout the neighborhood.

All four of the board members are Rockridge residents who have volunteered because they appreciate the importance of keeping the community safe and secure.

Diana, an attorney at Jones Day in San Francisco, resides with her husband and daughter on Bryant Avenue. Parker, a retired symphony orchestra manager and current board chair of Chanticleer, lives on Shafter Avenue with his wife Teresa Darragh. Chris, the incoming Board President, who is responsible for content marketing at Osterweis Capital Management, also lives on Shafter Avenue with his wife.

They all join Josh Aycok, an investor with Synchrony Ventures and long-serving board member, who lives with his wife and two daughters on Locksley Avenue.
